
Biology: Life on Earth with Physiology

Chapter 1 (Preface - An Introduction to Life on Earth)

Biology - correct answer It is the study of all aspects of life and living things. Life is intangible and can't be simply defined.

Organism - correct answer It is an individual living thing. They all acquire and use materials and energy from chemical building blocks, maintaining organized complexity using energy, perceive and respond to stimuli, grow, reproduce, and have the capacity to evolve.

Cell - correct answer It is the smallest unit of life, having at least an outer membrane with a watery medium with organic molecules and genetic material of DNA.

Photosynthesis - correct answer It is the chemical reactions where light energy makes high-energy organic molecules, usually carbohydrates, from low-energy molecules, usually CO₂ and H₂O. Some cells use it.

Deoxyribonucleic Acid (DNA) - correct answer It is a molecule that is made of deoxyribose nucleotides and has the genetic information for living cells. It is carried on to offspring.

Evolution - correct answer It is the descent of modern organisms with modification from preexisting life forms, the theory that all organisms are related and have changed over time, and any change in the genetic makeup of a population from one population to the next. It is caused from differences in DNA among members of populations, inheritance of the differences, and natural selection.

Population - correct answer It is all the members of a species in a defined area at the same time and place and can interbreed. Changes in DNA are inevitable and cause evolution

Gene - correct answer It is the unit of heredity and a segment of DNA on a particular place on a chromosome with information of the amino acid sequence for a particular trait.
