The Mars Pathfinder Approach To Fasterbettercheaper:

Faster, Better, Cheaper Howard E. McCurdy, 2003-04-01 This excellent summary of an important part of NASA's history is recommended for all readers. Choice In Faster Better Cheaper Low Cost Innovation in the U S Space Program Howard E. McCurdy examines NASA's recent efforts to save money while improving mission frequency and performance. McCurdy details sixteen missions undertaken as the twentieth century drew to a close including an orbit of the moon, deployment of three space telescopes, four Earth-orbiting satellites, two rendezvous with comets and asteroids, and a test of an ion propulsion engine which cost less than the sum traditionally spent on a single conventionally planned planetary mission. He shows how these missions employed smaller spacecraft and cheaper technology to undertake less complex and more specific tasks in outer space. While the technological innovation and space exploration approach that McCurdy describes is still controversial, the historical perspective on its disappointments and triumphs points to ways of developing faster, better, and cheaper as a management manifesto. Readers interested in either the management or economics of complex organizations will find a wealth of material in this well-written exposition. Fans of space travel like the author himself will also enjoy the behind-the-scenes look at NASA's operation. Enterprise and Society The Mars Pathfinder Price Pritchett, Brian Muirhead, 1998 The Last of the Great Observatories George Henry Rieke, 2006-05-11 The Spitzer Space Observatory, originally known as the Space Infrared Telescope Facility (SIRTF), is the last of the four Great Observatories which also include the Hubble Space Telescope, the Chandra X-ray Observatory, and the Compton Gamma Ray Observatory. Developed over twenty years and dubbed the Infrared Hubble, Spitzer was launched in the summer of 2003 and has since contributed significantly to our understanding of the universe. George Rieke played a key role in Spitzer and now relates the story of how that observatory was built and launched into space. Telling the story of this single mission within the context of NASA's space science over two turbulent decades, he describes how, after a tortuous political trail to approval, Spitzer was started at the peak of NASA's experiment with streamlining and downsizing its mission development process, termed faster, better, cheaper. Up to its official start and even afterward, Spitzer was significant not merely in terms of its scientific value but because it stood at the center of major changes in space science policy and politics. Through interviews with many of the project participants, Rieke reconstructs the political and managerial process by which space missions are conceived, approved, and developed. He reveals that by the time Spitzer had been completed, a number of mission failures had undermined faith in faster, better, cheaper, and a more conservative approach was imposed. Rieke examines in detail the premises behind faster, better, cheaper, their strengths and weaknesses, and their ultimate impact within the context of NASA's continuing search for the best way to build future missions. Rieke's participant's perspective takes readers inside Congress and NASA to trace the progress of missions prior to the excitement of the launch, revealing the enormously complex and often disheartening political process that needs to be negotiated. He also shares some of the new observations and discoveries made by Spitzer in just its
