

The 17 Essential Qualities of a Team Player

by John C. Maxwell

(Fertig Notes)

1) ADAPTABLE

IF YOU WON'T CHANGE FOR THE TEAM, THE TEAM MAY CHANGE YOU

- Inflexibility is one of the worst human feelings. For rigidity of the mind there is no antidote. It carries the seeds of its own destruction.
- Blessed are the flexible, for they shall not be bent out of shape. Michael McGriff
- Team players who exhibit adaptability have certain characteristics.
 - 1) Teachable
Adaptable people always place a high priority on breaking new ground.
 - 2) Emotionally Secure
People who are not emotionally secure see almost everything as a challenge or a threat.
 - 3) Creative
There's an expression that says a person's age can be determined by the degree of pain he experiences when he comes in contact with a new idea. Quincy Jones
 - 4) Service Minded
Doing nothing for others is the undoing of one's self. Horace Mann
- To become more adaptable...Get into the habit of learning. For many years I carried a three-by-five card in my pocket. Every day when I learned something new, I'd write it down on the card. It got me in the habit of looking for things to learn. Reevaluate your role. The mental exercise will increase your flexibility. Think outside the lines. Many people aren't adaptable because they get into negative ruts. If you tend to be prone to ruts, then write down that phrase and keep it where you can see it every day: "Not why it can't be done but how it can be done."

2) COLLABORATIVE

WORKING TOGETHER PRECEDES WINNING TOGETHER

- Great challenges require great teamwork, and the quality most needed among teammates amid the pressure of a difficult challenge is collaboration. Cooperation is working together agreeably. Collaboration is working together aggressively. Each person brings something to the table that adds value to the relationship and synergy to the team.
- Becoming a collaborative team player requires a change in focus in four areas:
 - 1) Perception: See Teammates as Collaborators, Not Competitors
To collaborative team members, completing one another is more important than competing with one another. They perceive themselves as a unit working together, and they never allow competition between teammates to get to the point where it hurts the team.
 - 2) Attitude: Be Supportive, Not Suspicious, of Teammates
That means assuming that other people's motives are good unless proven otherwise. If you trust people, you will treat them better. And if you treat them better, you and they will be more likely to create collaborative relationships.
 - 3) Focus: Concentrate on the Team, Not on Yourself
As a person on a team, you will usually ask one of two questions when anything happens: "What's in it for me?" or "What does this do for the team?" Where you focus your attention says a lot about whether you compete with others or complete them.
 - 4) Results: Create Victories Through Multiplication
If you work alone, you leave a lot of victories on the table.
- You may not be working against the team, but that doesn't necessarily mean you're working for it, but that doesn't necessarily mean you're working for it. Do you bring cooperation and added value to your teammates — even to the people you don't enjoy being with? Do you help multiply the efforts of others? Or does the team become slower and less effective when you're involved? If you're not sure, talk to your teammates.
- Think win-win. Usually when you collaborate with others, you win, they win, and the team wins. Find someone on the team with a similar role whom you have previously seen as a competitor. Figure out ways you can share information and work together to benefit both you and the team.
