

1 Skills Acquisition

Cognitive stage of motor learning (Anderson, 1982); Fitts & Posner, 1967; Schmandt & Schmandt, 1977

2 Working Memory

Motor skills can be acquired without early dependence on the prefrontal cortex (Anderson, 1982; Beckenbach & Beckenbach, 1970)

3 Conscious Control

Variations of the same approach (e.g. hierarchical approach) (Anderson, 1982; Beckenbach, 1970; Marmstadt, 1992)

Implicit motor learning, reinvestment and movement disruption

6 Solutions

Reinvestment prevention (e.g. extinguishing implicit motor learning approaches via effortful reinforcement; Anderson & Shaffer, 1986; Beckenbach, 1970; Beckenbach, 1972); prevent use of task (Anderson & Matlock's) conscious processing hypothesis (1992); conscious task sharing during learning (Marmstadt, 1992); prevent hippocampus reading the reinforcing outcome (Anderson & Matlock's) behavioral self-activation no reinvestment, behavioral feedback (Anderson & Matlock, 2002)

5 Reinvestment prevention

Extinguishing implicit learning (Anderson, 1982); no skills are related to individualized movement when no salient task feedback

4 Reinvestment

Reinvestment by Matlock & Matlock found high reinvestment was more related to memory for explicit actions, in conscious processing (Anderson, 1992; Beckenbach, 1970; Matlock & Matlock, 2002); more explicit knowledge led to worse performance under pre-visualized greater threat of disruption from reinvestment.

Skill Acquisition And Human Performance:

Skill Acquisition and Human Performance Robert W. Proctor, Addie Dutta, 1995 Providing a coherent picture of how research on skills is conducted this volume brings together findings from a number of disciplines to enrich our current understanding of human skills. Taking an information processing approach the authors provide an historical and conceptual introduction and examine research studies in which comparatively simple laboratory tasks are used to investigate skill. They then consider performance of more complex tasks that impose greater demands on attention and memory. The book concludes by focusing on expertise in specific real world situations discussing applications to areas such as training the role of individual differences in abilities, situational performance shaping factors and the Human Performance.

D. Roy Davies, Gerald Matthews, Rob B. Stammers, Steve J. Westerman, 2013-10-23 Human Performance provides the student and researcher with a comprehensive and accessible review of performance in the real world and essential cognitive science theory. Four main sections cover both theoretical and practical issues. Section One outlines the perspectives on performance offered by contemporary cognitive science including information processing and neuroscience perspectives. Section Two presents a multi level view of the performer as biological organism, information processor and intentional agent. It reviews the development of the cognitive theory of performance through experimental studies and also looks at practical issues such as human error. Section Three reviews the impact of stress factors such as noise, fatigue and illness on performance. Section Four assesses individual and group differences in performance with accounts of ability, personality and aging.

Enhancing Human Performance Craig Speelman, 2014-03-17 The chapters in this book have their origins in papers presented at one of two conferences organised by the Global Science and Technology Forum GSTF the Annual International Conference on Human Resource Management and Professional Development HRM and PD 2012 and the Annual Conference on Cognitive and Behavioural Psychology CBP 2013 both held in Singapore. On the basis of these presentations authors were invited to rework their papers to fit within the theme of enhancing human performance. This theme was deliberately broad so as to include a wide range of research areas and yet was sufficiently specific that the chapters would cohere as different perspectives on the factors that affect human performance. This collection of chapters reflects the disparate contexts in which human performance is examined and the many factors that impinge on performance in a negative way and the conditions under which performance can be improved. The book explores topics such as the effects of a computer maths game on the acquisition of arithmetic skills in school children, the effects of exercise on cognition in children with autism spectrum disorder, the influence of bilingualism on visuospatial memory, the potential beneficial effects of beliefs in the extraordinary e.g. paranormal phenomena, an examination of how attention to food related images is affected as a function of food deprivation, the factors that affect the perceived effort of credit repayment, the impact of the emotional valence of faces on the spatial direction of attention, emotional eating in Thailand, the relationship between work roles, worker characteristics and work
