Small and medium-sized enterprises, globalization and the internet Oliver Burgis, 2002-12-04 Inhaltsangabe
Abstract The last decade was characterized by mainly two major developments The first was the ongoing globalization of the markets A development that was not absolutely new in the nineties since it is already progressing since the fifties But it was in recent years when this development gained such an unprecedented momentum and dynamics which most people and enterprises were just not prepared for The second was the emerge of the Internet and the following e hype about the new economy Larry Downes named both in his much considered article Behind Porter as two of three new driving forces and influencing factors for the economic affairs of the new century And he might probably be right Although one of them suffered quite a setback at the end of the nineties when the Internet bubble finally busted But if one looks on the technological developments taking place then there is no doubt that the Internet will continue its triumphal procession Certainly in a different way as it did in the last decade And probably it will not constitute a new economy but it certainly will extremely change the old one The same is true for globalization although its effects are maybe not that obvious But the trend towards one global market is obvious The last event in that respect was probably the Peoples Republic of China entering the World Trade Organization and opening thereby up its markets for foreign enterprises Before that background and as policy makers and business people look for development paths which might take economies successfully over the next decades three of the issues which are receiving a lot of attention are What is the effect of globalization What is the role of small and medium sized enterprises What is the impact of electronic commerce the rapidly changing ways in which commercial activities may be undertaken using innovations in information technology The small and medium sized enterprises are building the backbone of the German economy These companies were responsible for the fast recovery of Germany after Second World War and since then have greatly contributed to develop Germany to the third largest economy in terms of gross national product in the world Ludwig Erhardt former German Chancellor and influential Minister of economics once described the importance of the Mittelstand for the German economy and society in a speech held in Gteburg 50 years ago And his words retain their

Small- and Medium-Size Enterprise Financing in Eastern Europe Leora F. Klapper, 2016 There is currently a large interest in understanding firms access to finance particularly in the financing of small and medium size enterprises SMEs But the financing patterns of SMEs across countries is not well understood For example little is known about the relative importance of equity debt and inter firm financing for SMEs across countries The authors use the Amadeus database which includes financial information on over 97 000 private and publicly traded firms in 15 Eastern and Central European countries The Amadeus database allows the authors the opportunity to provide a new analysis of the general financing patterns of private firms across a large sample of Eastern European countries The summary statistics show that the size of the SME sector as measured by the percentage of total employment in Eastern European countries is smaller than in most developed economies Although the authors find in almost every country in the sample a large number of SMEs as a percentage of total firms the SMEs in Eastern Europe are generally small and hire few employees However SMEs seem to constitute the most dynamic sector of the Eastern European economies relative to large firms In general the SME sector comprises relatively younger more highly leveraged and more profitable and faster growing firms This suggests that a new type of firm is emerging in transition economies that is more market and profit oriented But at the same time these firms appear to have financial constraints that impede their access to long term financing and ability to grow This paper a product of Finance Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to better
