Studies In Economics External Influences:

External Influences and the Educational Landscape Alexander Krauss, 2012-10-29 While the analysis is not the first to investigate empirically the effects of different individual or household factors on school access and completion of Ghanaians it extends previous work by simultaneously incorporating individual household community regional and national characteristics and also illustrates the latest evidence by applying international data sources and unusually detailed household survey data for a sub Saharan country Its focus is threefold i gaining a richer understanding of which external influences hinder educational access and attainment in Ghana ii how to better tackle these challenges and iii analyzing how educational development affects the country s overall development An interview with the Minister of Education helps guide the policy orientation of the analysis by identifying several critical challenges and areas of needed policy attention Findings from the data analysis indicate that the geographic divide between the North and South increased economic growth demographic pressure and a number of individual household and community factors especially children s nutritional and labour status are the most important challenges in increasing levels of education among Ghanaians in years to come Finally the analysis pilots a new and comprehensive results and capacity focused policy matrix to help the Government of Ghana realign policy priorities and reform existing programs To this end respective policy levers on the demand and supply side are discussed with particular reference to external and demand side interventions which have not received the necessary attention at the policy level to improve educational opportunities and outcomes at all levels

Economic Inequality and Higher Education Stacy Dickert-Conlin, Ross Rubenstein, 2007-06-21 The vast disparities in college attendance and graduation rates between students from different class backgrounds is a growing social concern Economic Inequality and Higher Education investigates the connection between income inequality and unequal access to higher education and proposes solutions that the state and federal governments and schools themselves can undertake to make college accessible to students from all backgrounds Economic Inequality and Higher Education convenes experts from the fields of education economics and public policy to assess the barriers that prevent low income students from completing college For many students from disadvantaged socioeconomic backgrounds the challenge isn t getting into college but getting out with a degree Helping this group will require improving the quality of education in the community colleges and lower tier public universities they are most likely to attend Documenting the extensive disjuncture between the content of state mandated high school testing and college placement exams Michael Kirst calls for greater alignment between K 12 and college education Amanda Pallais and Sarah Turner examine barriers to access at elite universities for low income students including tuition costs lack of information and poor high school records as well as recent initiatives to increase socioeconomic diversity at private and public universities Top private universities have increased the level and transparency of financial aid while elite public universities have focused on outreach mentoring and counseling and both sets of reforms show signs of success

Ron Ehrenberg notes that financial aid policies in both public and private universities have recently shifted towards merit based aid away from the need based aid that is most helpful to low income students Ehrenberg calls on government policy makers to create incentives for colleges to increase their representation of low income students Higher education is often vaunted as the primary engine of upward mobility Instead as inequality in America rises colleges may be reproducing income disparities from one generation to the next Economic Inequality and Higher Education illuminates this worrisome trend and suggests reforms that educational institutions and the government must implement to make the dream of a college degree a reality for all motivated students Encyclopedia of Education Economics and Finance Dominic J.
