

GEOMETRICAL OPTICS

- Branch of physics that studies nature and geometrical properties of light, how it interacts with matter and general design of instruments (optical) for its usage and detection.

Nature of light

The nature of light was for many years remained a great mystery even though we know that light is an electromagnetic wave.

By 18th century, the general acceptance as favoured by Isaac Newton was that light consisted of a stream of particles traveling in straight lines which produced a sensation of vision as they encroached on the retina (eye).

Lastly it was Maxwell who predicted electromagnetic waves that propagate at the speed of light ( $c = 2.9979 \times 10^8 \text{ m/s} = 3 \times 10^8 \text{ m/s}$ ).

Finally, Hertz went on to demonstrate how the electromagnetic waves showed the same interference, reflection, refraction and polarization effects as light (does).

Today, scientists view the behavior of light as waves (electromagnetic waves) in some situations and particles (photons) in other situation, that is, light is recognized as having both wave and particle properties. This is known as wave-particle duality.

Huygens' Principle

- Huygens Christiaan (Dutch physicist) proposed a simple theory of light (1678). The theory assumes that light is a wave but nothing was given about the details of light waves. The complete and accurate theory of electromagnetic waves was elaborated by Maxwell (1878). Huygens gave an idea of how light waves should move and his statement (statement of the principle) was that "All points of a wave front can be considered as sources of spherical wavelets which spread in all directions. After time t the new position of a wave
