Framing War and Genocide Gregory Kent,2006 Although just a decade ago the destruction of a European state and society through war and genocide remains one of the worst global crises of the post Cold War era with reverberations still felt today Bombardment and sieges of major towns and cities concentration and death camps and the mass slaughter and expulsion of civilians were all characteristics of a type of warfare that Europe had never dreamed might return The war against Bosnia had a major impact on European and wider global consciousness being as it was then the most reported debated and analyzed conflict to date But despite the extensive coverage of Bosnia the author contends the conflict and its origins were certainly misunderstood there being a significant gulf between media perspectives and the thrust of academic discourse This multidisciplinary book is based on extensive research into the TV and newspaper framing of the war during the critical early period of its development Uniquely the analysis of media is underpinned by an extensive and detailed historical argument about the nature of the wars and the politics of the Federation including the use of media in war making strategies in Yugoslavia itself It will be of interest to scholars of IR and politics media communication and journalism studies and war and genocide studies Journalists and the general reader will find the book accessible with valuable insights into reporting war and understanding media representation of conflict Key issues and questions addressed include the critical use of official sources and propaganda in journalism how media and policymakers interact to define and frame problems for policy action what factors limit the accurate reporting of war what is genocide and how is the Genocide Convention relevant in practice and how to report genocide when such coverage conflicts with state interests American Journal of Education and College Review ,1872 Vol 25 is the report of the commissioner of education for 1880 v 29 report for 1877

The Character of War in the 21st Century Caroline Holmqvist-Jonsäter,Christopher Coker,2009-12-04 This edited volume addresses the relationship between the essential nature of war and its character at the beginning of the twenty first century The focus is on the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan situations that occupy a central role in international affairs and that have become highly influential in thinking about war in the widest sense The intellectual foundation of the volume is Clausewitz s insight that though war has an enduring nature its character changes with time space social structure and culture The fact that war s character varies means that different actors may interpret experience and ultimately wage war differently The conflict between the ways that war is conceptualised in the prevailing Western and international discourse and the manner in which it plays out on the ground is a key discussion point for scholars and practitioners in the field of international relations Contributions combine insights from social theory philosophy sociology and strategic studies and ask directly what contemporary war is and what the implications are for the future This book will be of much interest to students of war studies strategic studies security studies and IR in general Caroline Holmqvist Jons ter is currently completing a PhD in the conflation of war and policing in international conflicts at the Department of War Studies King s College London Christopher Coker is Professor of International Relations at the London School of Economics and Political Science LSE He is the author of 11 books on war and security issues Graduate Studies in a World Reborn University of California, Los Angeles.
