

Topic 1: ISSUES IN EAST AFRICAN HISTORY

History is a discipline that deals with a study of transformations that have occurred in human societies over a period of time. History is about change and change in defined human societies. These societies are defined by culture, religion, economic and political systems and also by geographical localities; African History began asserting itself as an independent genre of knowledge in the sixty years or so. Prior to 1950, African history was discussed as a sub theme of European activities in Africa. The history of East African History is a category of historical knowledge that focuses in the study of change and transformation in societies that have resided in the East African region. East Africa comprises of Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania; Thus, the history of East Africa addresses itself to social, economic and political changes in the three east African countries. The history of East Africa is broad. In terms of periodization, it covers the period from 1.A.D to 2009.A.D. At the level of content this history comprises of migration and settlement patterns of communities that occupy East African Countries. It also covers systems of production e.g. hunting and gathering, pastoralism, peasant farming, trade and industry. Similarly, the content also consists of political systems of governance that include; as cephalous (decentralized) and centralized systems of administration. It also focuses on European colonial political economy, struggle for independence, the independent state, post-colonial economy, governance in independent east Africa and the impact of global politics and economy on East African economies and states. East African history too focuses on the theory and method used in the study and writing of socio-economic and political developments among communities in East African countries. In terms of theory, one has in mind liberal, Marxist/neo-Marxist and post-modernist theories. In talking of method, one has to think of oral traditions, archaeology, social anthropology, linguistics and other multi-disciplinary approaches.

- As cephalous: A system of administration that is based on council of elders
- Centralized System of administration: a system of administration where the head of state is the head of government and he/she is referred to as a chief/king.
- Liberal theory: This is a method of explaining and presenting knowledge by emphasizing issues of democracy, human rights and free market economy
- Marxist theory.: This refers to a system of knowledge which began with Karl Marx who argued that class consciousness, class struggle and modes of production. He developed the concept of political economy to explain socio-economic and political transformations in human societies. In his analysis he brought out the argument that materialism is at the centre of development. Neo Marxists modified Marxist theories and adapted them to suit specific states in Africa, Asia and Latin America.
- Post modernism: This refers to approaches that have been developed in the post-cold war period to study transformation in human societies. Post modernism is a cross breed of liberal and Marxist/neo-Marxist theories. These are theories that emphasize liberal democracy, liberalization of the economy, human rights, gender, Information and Communication technology and global political economy in the study of developments in human societies.

Studies In East African History:

A History of Education in East Africa O. W. Furley, Thomas Watson, 1978 A History of Education in East Africa (1900-1973) S. M. E. Lugumba, J. C. Ssekamwa, 1973 Studies in East African History Norman Robert Bennett, 1958
Zamani Historical Association of Kenya, 1968 The Columbia Guide to East African Literature in English Since 1945 Simon Gikandi, Evan Mwangi, 2007

The Columbia Guide to East African Literature in English Since 1945 challenges the conventional belief that the English language literary traditions of East Africa are restricted to the former British colonies of Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania. Instead, these traditions stretch far into such neighboring countries as Somalia and Ethiopia. Simon Gikandi and Evan Mwangi assemble a truly inclusive list of major writers and trends. They begin with a chronology of key historical events and an overview of the emergence and transformation of literary culture in the region. Then they provide an alphabetical list of major writers and brief descriptions of their concerns and achievements. Some of the writers discussed include the Kenyan novelists Grace Ogot and Ngugi wa Thiong'o, Ugandan poet and essayist Taban Lo Liyong, Ethiopian playwright and poet Tsegaye Gabre Medhin, Tanzanian novelist and diplomat Peter Palangyo, Ethiopian novelist Berhane Mariam Sahle Sellassie, and the novelist M. G. Vassanji, who portrays the Indian diaspora in Africa, Europe, and North America. Separate entries within this list describe thematic concerns such as colonialism, decolonization, the black aesthetic, and the language question; the growth of genres like autobiography and popular literature; important movements like cultural nationalism and feminism; and the impact of major forces such as AIDS, HIV, Christian missions, and urbanization.

Comprehensive and richly detailed, this guide offers a fresh perspective on the role of East Africa in the development of African and world literature in English and a new understanding of the historical, cultural, and geopolitical boundaries of the region.

Generations Past Andrew Burton, Hélène Charton-Bigot, 2010-09-15

Contemporary Africa is demographically characterized above all else by its youthfulness. In East Africa, the median age of the population is now a striking 17.5 years, and more than 65 percent of the population is age 24 or under. This situation has attracted growing scholarly attention, resulting in an important and rapidly expanding literature on the position of youth in African societies. While the scholarship examining the contemporary role of youth in African societies is rich and growing, the historical dimension has been largely neglected in the literature thus far. Generations Past seeks to address this gap through a wide-ranging selection of essays that covers an array of youth-related themes in historical perspective. Thirteen chapters explore the historical dimensions of youth in nineteenth, twentieth, and twenty-first century Ugandan, Tanzanian, and Kenyan societies. Key themes running through the book include the analytical utility of youth as a social category, intergenerational relations, and the passage of time; youth as a social and political problem; sex and gender roles among East African youth; and youth as historical agents of change. The strong list of contributors includes prominent scholars of the region, and the collection encompasses a good geographical spread of all three East African countries.

BOOK JACKET Revealing Prophets David Anderson, Douglas Hamilton Johnson, 1995 The purpose of this book is to move towards a clearer understanding of the history of prophets within the region of East Africa and to give an analytical account of the different forms prophecy has taken in different places The Archaeological and Linguistic Reconstruction of African History Christopher Ehret, Merrick Posnansky, 2023-11-15 This title combines archaeology and linguistics to explore Africa's early history especially where written records are scarce or absent By pairing the physical evidence of past societies with insights from language evolution the book reveals a fuller picture of Africa's cultural and historical development Archaeology provides tangible data on material culture and timelines while linguistics offers clues about past social structures beliefs and migrations through language relationships Together these fields offer complementary perspectives on Africa's past allowing scholars to reconstruct societal links and movements across time and space The book's contributors experts in archaeology and linguistics present case studies from four major regions Nubia and northern Sudan equatorial Africa eastern Africa and Ghana Each section begins with a regional overview that synthesizes existing archaeological and linguistic findings framing the case studies within broader historical patterns For example in Nubia where evidence is relatively complete the section discusses correlations that extend into northeastern Africa In equatorial Africa linguistic data is more robust while archaeological evidence is still emerging showing intriguing alignment with linguistic patterns Eastern Africa focuses on the impacts of Bantu expansion and early agricultural practices while the West African section despite limited data centers on recent insights from Ghana illustrating both progress and research gaps By presenting these regions the book demonstrates the significant potential of combining archaeological and linguistic methods to uncover Africa's past While some areas such as West Africa still require further exploration the integration of these two disciplines reveals a complex dynamic historical landscape and raises new questions for future research The collection shows that archaeology and linguistics together provide a powerful framework for understanding Africa's early societies and lays a foundation for deeper investigations into the continent's history This title is part of UC Press's Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press's mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1982 Prelude to East
