Prediction

Written instructions that guide learner responses.

Cultural Competence

Recognizing cultural differences, reflecting on biases, understanding cultural interactions, building cultural knowledge, and modifying service delivery.

Distinguish between dependent and independent variables

Independent Variable (IV) is the variable that is systematically manipulated to the experimenter to evaluate its effect on behavior.
- Independent Variable = Manipulation

Dependent Variable (DV) is the behavior that is targeted for change.
Extraneous Variables are any variables other than the independent variable that could affect the dependent variable. These are controlled, i.e., held constant to isolate the IV's effect.

Confounding Variables are extraneous variables that change with the independent variable, making it unclear whether the IV or the confound caused the effect.

Example: In a study measuring the impact of reinforcement on task completion, the delivery of reinforcement is a... where for completion reinforcement is the independent variable and the frequency of task completion is the dependent variable, as it may vary in response to reinforcement delivery. Let's say that the hospital starts giving verbal praise (reinforcement) to patients when they finish a task. Now it's unclear whether the verbal praise or prior reinforcement is causing the task completion. This is a confounding variable. Extraneous variables are any variables other than the independent variable that could affect the dependent variable. These are controlled, i.e., held constant to isolate the IV's effect.

Independent Variables		Dependent Variables
Controlled by the experimenter	Manipulated by the experimenter	Measured (but not directly manipulated)
Represents the independent variable (e.g., reinforcement type)	Represents the dependent variable (e.g., response rate, duration)
Manipulated by the experimenter	Observed for changes resulting from manipulation
