The Mound Builders:

The Mound Builders Robert Silverberg,1986-05-01 In Illinois the one hundred foot Cahokia Mound spreads impressively across sixteen acres and as many as ten thousand more mounds dot the Ohio River Valley alone The Mound Builders traces the speculation surrounding these monuments and the scientific excavations which uncovered the history and culture of the ancient Americans who built them The mounds were constructed for religious and secular purposes some time between 1000 B C and 1000 A D and they have prompted curiosity and speculation from very early times European settlers found them evidence of some ancient and glorious people Even as eminent an American as Thomas Jefferson joined the controversy though his conclusions that the mounds were actually cemeteries of ancient Indians remained unpopular for nearly a century Only in the late 19th century as Smithsonian Institution investigators developed careful methodologies and reliable records did the period of scientific investigation of the mounds and their builders begin Silverberg follows these excavations and then recounts the story they revealed of the origins development and demise of the mound builder culture ancient history and enumerating its devastating consequences for contemporary Native people Built upon primary sources and first person accounts the story that The Mound Builder Myth tells is a forgotten chapter of American history but one that reads like the Da Vinci Code as it plays out at the upper reaches of government religion and science And as far fetched as it now might seem that a lost white race once ruled prehistoric America the damage done by this ancient myth has clear echoes in today s arguments over white nationalism multiculturalism alternative facts and the role of science and the control of knowledge in public life Primer of Ohio Archaeology: The Mound Builders and the Indians H. Northern Great Lakes, 1200-1600 Meghan C L Howey,2012-11-20 Rising above the northern Michigan landscape prehistoric burial mounds and impressive circular earthen enclosures bear witness to the deep history of the region's ancient indigenous peoples These mounds and earthworks have long been treated as isolated finds and have never been connected to the social dynamics of the time in which they were constructed a period called Late Prehistory In Mound Builders and Monument Makers of the Northern Great Lakes 1200-1600 Meghan C L Howey uses archaeology to make this connection She shows how indigenous communities of the northern Great Lakes used earthen structures as gathering places for ritual and social interaction which maintained connected egalitarian societies in the process Examining every available ceramic sherd from every northern earthwork Howey combines regional archaeological investigations with ethnohistory analysis of spatial relationships and collaboration with tribal communities to explore changes in the area's social setting from 1200 to 1600. During this time cultural shifts such as the adoption of maize horticulture led to the creation of the earthen constructions. Burial mounds were erected marking claims to resources and defining areas for local ritual gatherings while massive circular enclosures were constructed as intersocietal ceremonial centers. Together, Howey shows these structures made up part of an interconnected, purposefully designed cultural landscape. When societies incorporated the earthworks into their egalitarian social and ritual behaviors, the structures became something more ceremonial monuments. The first systematic examination of earthen constructions in what is today Michigan Mound Builders and Monument Makers of the Northern Great Lakes (1200-1600) reveals complicated indigenous histories that played out in the area before European contact. Howey's richly illustrated investigation increases our understanding of the diverse cultures and dynamic histories of the pre-Columbian ancestors of today's Great Lake tribes.
