Modernization Frustrated Scott Newton, Dilwyn Porter, 2026-01-30 First published in 1988 Modernization Frustrated now with a new preface by the authors is a provocative analysis of modern British economic and political history It takes as its central theme the ascendancy of the core financial institutions the City the Bank of England and the Treasury and argues that in the legitimate pursuit of their own interests the financiers have committed the British state to a liberal economic orthodoxy which is very often at conflict with the best interests of British producers Tracing the roots of this financial ascendancy back to the 18th and 19th centuries the authors highlight how early industrialists were excluded from circles of wealth and power due to class prejudice a legacy that persisted well into the 20th century This enduring bias has allowed the free movement of capital to take precedence over the funding and restructuring needs of industry contributing to Britain's decline as a manufacturing economy compared to other developed capitalist nations Continuous modernization is a pre requisite for the survival and development of an industrial economy and the authors describe in detail the many initiatives and movements throughout the 20th century which were rendered ineffective because the proponents were unable to secure the support of government and financial institutions
