Evaluating Information: A Guide for Users of Social Science Research Jeffrey Katz, Kenneth H. Cook, Wayne W. Crouch, 1998. This book introduces students to social science research from the consumer's point of view. The authors believe that while social science may not require that every student of the discipline will have to conduct research studies, it is still essential for students to successfully read, understand, and evaluate the research published in their field. To that end, the authors of this text have streamlined their narrative, omitting the burden of technical jargon and focusing on the broad elements common to all kinds of social science research, such as experimental survey and case study. Questions to Ask, found at the end of each chapter, highlight the specific criteria to consider when evaluating research and offer a clear and accessible presentation of the general principles in social science research.

Mapping the World Ralph E. Ehrenberg, 2006. This book highlights more than a hundred maps from every era and every part of the world. Organized chronologically, they display an astonishing variety of cartographic styles and techniques. They range from priceless artistic masterworks like the 1507 Waldseemüller world map, the first to use the name America, to such practical artifacts as a Polynesian stick chart, a creation of bent twigs, seashells, and coconut palms that was nevertheless capable of guiding an outrigger canoe safely across thousands of miles of trackless and seemingly endless ocean. Some like the portolans or sea charts of the Age of Discovery were closely guarded state secrets that shaped the rise and fall of empires; others circulated widely and showed such fabled routes as the Silk Road across western Asia and the Oregon and Santa Fe Trails that opened up the American West.
