Introduction

The tragedy of suicide in adolescents is experienced by all countries of the world with as many as 200,000 youth and young adults ending their life in the prime of their life because of self-murder each year.¹ Such a tragedy should be unacceptable to clinicians of the world and this article examines factors leading to such death in our youth with recommendations on how to prevent such a worldwide carnage. A major issue in suicide prevention is to screen all children and adolescents for depression and other factors that may trigger suicide in adolescence.

Adolescent Suicide

Japan

The National Plan for Maternal and Child Health for 2001 to 2010 in Japan has listed suicide prevention as a major priority for health care providers in Japan.² Other national priorities include reduction in rates of abortion, sexually transmitted diseases, unhealthy body weights

(i.e., thinness or obesity), and drug abuses (i.e., smoking and alcohol consumption). Suicide rates for male Japanese youth 15 to 19 years of age increased from 5 per 100,000 in 1990 to 9 per 100,000 in 2003 while the rate for females increased from 3 to 5 in the same time period.³ Suicide rates for young adults, 20 to 24 years of age, are double or more that noted for the adolescent population.

United States

Suicide rates in adolescents and young adults in the United States have varied in the 20th century and were reflective of greater societal forces. For example, rates were highest in the 1930s in partial response to major economic crises in the adult population; these rates dropped in the 1940s and 1950s only to double from 1960 to the early 1990s.^{4,5} Suicide rates in youth dropped somewhat from the 1990s to 2001, then increasing in 2005. Proposed reasons for the drop from 1990 to 2003 was the increased use of selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs) to combat depression. A United

M. Yasir Arafat, Sujita Kumar Kar, 2025-06-12 This book discusses the association between ecological and social determinants and suicidal behavior Suicidal behavior is an extremely complex human behavior It is an outcome of complex interactions among multiple factors like gene and environment biopsychosocial proximal and distal factors Several risk factors such as psychiatric disorders life events social deprivation personality traits and disorders and substance abuse have been identified even though those vary based on culture time country and methods of assessment In recent times evidence has shown associations among ecological variables like the human development index the income of the country the GINI index educational attainment the green environment climate change and suicidal behavior At the same time there are interlinked confounding variables that challenge the findings Given the lack of literature discussing these findings this book seeks to compare and contrast the ecological aspects and suicidal behavior holistically The Cry of Tamar Pamela Cooper-White, 1995 In this comprehensive practical and gripping assessment of various forms of violence against women Pamela Cooper White challenges the Christian churches to examine their own responses to the cry of Tamar in our time She describes specific forms of such violence and outlines appropriate pastoral responses Substance Abuse and Suicide Prevention Theodora Fine, 2010-05 A critical issue for suicide prevention is the role of substance abuse SA in the interplay of factors that result in a greater risk for suicidal behaviors This report focuses on the current state of knowledge at the intersection of suicide and SA Focuses on the epidemiology of suicide itself and presents a brief history of the growing focus on suicide as a public health issue of significant concern Provides an overview of what we know and do not know of the impact of SA including both drugs and alcohol on suicide risk It also acknowledges the critical interrelationships among SA mental illness and suicide risk Explores suicide prevention within the public health context of behavioral health promotion and illness prevention Illustrations Rural Mental Health K.
