Sunlighting as Formgiver for Architecture William M. C. Lam,1986 Daylight Design of Buildings Nick Baker,Koen Steemers,2014-01-02 To complement the critical and objective view gleaned from the study of some sixty buildings this design manual has been developed to provide a more synthetic approach to the principles which lie behind successful daylight design These principles are illustrated with examples drawn from the case study buildings The emphasis throughout has been on practical methods to improve design rather than techniques studied for any intrinsic interest The book provides the necessary tools to assist the designer to provide well daylit interiors and shows that good daylight design is not a restriction on architectural expression but on the contrary acts as an inspiration and foundation for good architecture

Perception and Lighting as Formgivers for Architecture William M. C. Lam,1977 Heating, Cooling, Lighting

Norbert M. Lechner,2014-09-23 Sustainable environmental control through building design Heating Cooling and Lighting is the industry standard text on environmental control systems with the emphasis on sustainable design By detailing the many factors that contribute to the comfort in a building this book helps architects minimize mechanical systems and energy usage over the life of the building by siting building design and landscaping to maximize natural heating cooling and lighting This new fourth edition includes new information on integrated design strategies and designing for the Tropics Resources include helpful case studies checklists diagrams and a companion website featuring additional cases an image bank and instructor materials Designing buildings that require less energy to heat cool and light means allowing the natural energy of the sun and wind to reduce the burden on the mechanical and electrical systems Basic design decisions regarding size orientation and form have a great impact on the sustainability cost and comfort of a building Heating Cooling and Lighting provides detailed guidance for each phase of a design project Readers will Understand the concept of sustainability as applied to energy sources Review the basic principles of thermal comfort and the critical role of climate Learn the fundamentals of solar responsive design including active and passive solar systems as well as photovoltaics Discover how siting architectural design and landscaping can reduce the requirements for mechanical and electrical systems In sustainable design mechanical and electrical systems should be used to only accomplish what the architect could not by the design of the building itself With this in mind designers require a comprehensive understanding of both the properties of energy and the human factors involved in thermal comfort Heating Cooling and Lighting is the complete industry leading resource for designers interested in sustainable environmental control Buildings Energy Conservation ,1986 Progressive Architecture ,1990

Daylighting Performance and Design Gregg D. Ander,1995 In a unique design manual format that includes ample illustrations and white space for sketches and notes Ander shows readers how to embrace the light with architectural design From evaluation to execution the book is a veritable catalog of daylighting strategies materials methods of construction and significant technological advances How Buildings Learn Stewart Brand,1995-10-01 A captivating exploration of the ever evolving world of architecture and the untold stories buildings tell When a building is finished being built that isn't the end of its story More than any other human artifacts buildings improve with time if they're allowed to. Buildings adapt by being constantly refined and reshaped by their occupants and in that way architects can become artists of time rather than simply artists of space From the connected farmhouses of New England to I M Pei's Media Lab from the evolution of bungalows to the invention of Santa Fe Style from Low Road military surplus buildings to a High Road English classic like Chatsworth this is a far ranging survey of unexplored essential territory Discover how structures become living organisms shaped by the people who inhabit them and learn how architects can harness the power of time to create enduring works of art through the interconnected worlds of design function and human ingenuity 1983 International Daylighting Conference, 16-18 February 1983, Phoenix, Arizona, U.S.A., 1983

Passive Solar Conference, 1997 Architecture Exam Review: Nonstructural topics David Kent Ballast, 1998 Window Design Chartered Institution of Building Services Engineers, 1987 This document is a revision and expansion of Technical Report No Daytime Lighting in Buildings The original document was published in 1962 by the Illuminating Engineering Society A revision was published in 1972 Since then attitudes towards the lighting of buildings have changed Some of the reasons for this are the considerable increase in the cost of energy and the recognition of the need to use it efficiently in the commercial sector particularly the use of computers has resulted in different approaches to the use of space within buildings

The earlier document concerned itself mainly with design for daylight This new document while sharing this concern brings together in greater detail than before the other design factors which are influenced by daylight design decisions It is all too easy to design windows to provide daylight and at the same time create problems of unwanted noise intrusion glare summertime overheating and energy waste This guide provides designers with a means of identifying the important factors and a method of solving some of the design problems which will inevitably arise The reader's attention is drawn to the fact that in applying data and ideas from the different sections of the guide there will inevitably be a need to retain a balance between often conflicting requirements This document is intended to supplement the current range of CIBSE documentation and there is ample cross referencing The guide is divided into Part A Design sequence and Part B Design information The reference numbers throughout Part A and the supplementary numbers within the sectional reference lists in Part B refer to the Classified Bibliography on page 64 Part A guides the designer through the various stages of design and indicates the interaction between daylighting considerations and others It is cross referenced to Part B which provides more detailed guidance on prediction methods and basic data along with references to the relevant CIBSE publications The design information section is longer than the design sequence which it supports This is inevitable when alternative evaluation and prediction methods are provided It is not envisaged that a designer would ever work step by step through the whole design sequence For this reason Part A is set out in a three column format to enable the reader more easily to locate the particular material which interests him from the left hand column to read the relevant text in the centre column and to pick up the references from the right hand column Many aspects of window design may legitimately be based on experience or intuition rather than on formal analysis for example the use of splayed reveals the position of glazing bars and the use of the colour The role of the design sequence is to prompt the designer when he reaches an impasse and to offer a rational basis for decision making whenever necessary This publication refers to the design of conventional windows in the United Kingdom though it may also apply to other localities with a similar climate Some of the procedures presented are relatively new for example the concept of average daylight factor Although values of average daylight factor have been recommended it should be noted that experience of what the precise values imply in terms of daylight quality and quantity is limited and the recommendations may be changed in the light of experience On a similar note some of the techniques presented for designing conventional windows may not be totally reliable when applied to atrium design Therefore caution is urged when applying the content of the guide to anything other than conventional fenestration In this content window covers vertical glazing in walls and glazing in sloping environments such as roofs Some aspects of window design are beyond the scope of this guide such as constructional methods or problems of strength or weather tightness Guidance on these aspects can be obtained from the window manufacturers
