Some online services provide ready-to-use online modules, some do that but for a fee, some don't, most just have links. So be on your lookout at various locations connecting resources to each other and your online location. (There are also examples of more elaborate modules.) For a full module introduction, explore our links to other offerings. If you want a full list, we can recommend that you visit the 800 number and go directly to finditfirst.com (this is the main website). The module is available in Spanish, Chinese, and Arabic, and a French version is under development.

Note: Please refer to the Hardware Component section of the user's manual for a diagram of layout of the cable modem and a description of the connections required for the following steps.
 2. Disconnect one of the lowest cables in the cable modem's register (opposite the chip and at the bottom cable) in the Cable Modem in the front panel of the cable modem. Then, follow the connection to your home network:
 - The recommended connection is between an available port on your wall port and the cable modem. (If no such port is available, you can use a patch (cable) or a patch cord.)
 - Alternatively, you may directly be a modem (cable) to a computer's serial or parallel or network or for connecting to the cable modem.
 3. Plug the power cord into the AC (in) interface in the front panel of the cable modem and your power source. The cable modem is now on. (Leave it for about 5 minutes.)
 4. For the cable modem to be activated, you need to download the modem software to your laptop. Refer to the Software section of the user's manual for details on how to download and install the software.
- Note: After 1 to 5 minutes of power on the first time, connect the cable modem to your computer and connect to the appropriate software for communication. You'll receive the CD, USB, and/or Serial modem type. After that, the modem will connect to the Internet.
