the Pathophysiology of Heart Disease Pawan K. Singal, 2012-12-06 Over two centuries ago oxygen was discovered as air vital the component of the earth's atmosphere necessary for life Less than five years after this discovery it was found that oxygen was both a life sustaining and life threatening inhalant as it plays a role in the two extremes of the animal kingdom life and death In the subsequent years we have made major strides in understanding the role of oxygen in maintaining life and volumes of information are now available on this topic Our knowledge of the contribution of oxygen in cellular dysfunction and cell death which for the most part had lagged behind has begun to catch up The deleterious effects of oxygen radicals and activated oxygen species on a variety of biological systems have now been described Recently attention has also been focused on the toxic effects of oxygen on the cardiovascular system The major aim of the present treatise is to offer an integrated view of the pathophysiological aspects of oxygen toxicity in the heart and blood vessels coupled with a review of therapeutic approaches hopes with free radical scavengers and antioxidants Internationally known expert investigators provide a concise and critical review on the topic of their expertise which also contains data from their own research Free Radicals, Aging, and Degenerative Diseases John E. Mechanisms of Synaptopathies: Emerging Synaptic aging-related molecular pathways in Neurological Disorders Dario Maschi, Ramiro Quinta, Carlos Cruchaga, Laura Ibanez, 2024-01-11 Synapses are complex highly specialized biological structures Therefore even slight functional disturbance can lead to disruptive brain disorders Dysfunction of these structures is associated with a variety of aging related neurodegenerative conditions such as Alzheimer's and Parkinson's disease Most synaptopathies compromise complex signaling pathways by progressively affecting the synaptic protein repertoire Currently the treatment of most of these pathologies focuses on the mitigation of symptoms in consequence further efforts need to be made to elucidate the common molecular culprit and cellular mechanisms underlying the cause of these severe pathologies to serve as therapeutic targets for clinical applications In this Research Topic we aim to discuss synaptic dysfunction as a causal factor for aging related neurodegenerative diseases Despite the recent technological advances that allow identifying the individual synaptic components affected in these synaptic pathologies we know little about how they impact the synaptic function To promote the discussion around the molecular and functional connection we primarily welcome original research review and perspective articles emphasizing the relationship between synaptic function and the proteins or mechanisms

Innate immunity and neurodegenerative disorders Roger A Barker,Francesca Cicchetti,2014-11-03

Inflammation of the brain in the context of neurodegenerative disorders is an area of intense debate and discussion not least in terms of its pathogenic significance and the extent to which it drives disease processes and pathology This inflammation can take several forms including innate responses recruiting microglia humoral responses involving antibody complement mediated processes and cellular T cell activation of which the role and extent of each may differ between diseases Whilst some diseases have been more intensely linked to inflammation and long term degeneration e g MS more traditional chronic neurodegenerative disorders have been thought of in terms of intrinsic neuronal pathology with a secondary innate response However it has been described that microglia activation is an early event of many degenerative disorders and evidence is accumulating that it may play a critical role in actually causing pathology and driving disease processes If true this would have major therapeutic implications but what is the evidence that this is the case The initial observations by Patrick McGeer s group of post mortem tissue from patients with Parkinson s disease revealed the presence of activated brain microglia and has thus lead to the hypothesis that chronic inflammation could participate to neuronal degenerative processes The significance of these original observations has only been recently revisited and the development of more powerful tools to study the brain immune response has certainly contributed to this field of research Chronic inflammation in the brain can take many forms but of particular interest has been the resident microglia and the role they play in this process In this context microglia have often been thought to become activated only after the disease has begun and then to contribute minimally to the degenerative process Emerging new concepts challenge this view by proposing that microglial senescence for example may release the disease process and or accelerate it In addition microglia once activated can adopt different phenotypes which can be both pro inflammatory and pro repair and may impact not only on the healthy adult neuronal population but on those new neurons derived from neurogenic niches of the adult brain In this Research Topic we attempt to explore this by first considering the innate immune responses in the brain and the methods by which they can be studied experimentally and in patients with various neurodegenerative disorders This sets the scene for then discussing a range of different disorders including Alzheimer s Parkinson s Huntington s disease and amyotrophic lateral sclerosis These papers seek to discuss the evidence for an innate immune response and whether this is beneficial or detrimental as well as its therapeutic implications
