The Human Personality:

Molecular Genetics and the Human Personality Jonathan Benjamin, Richard P. Ebstein, Robert H.

Belmaker, 2008-08-13 In the 1960s and 1970s personality and mental illness were conceptualized in an intertwined psychodynamic model. Biological psychiatry for many unweaved that model and took mental illness for psychiatry and left personality to psychology. This book brings personality back into biological psychiatry not merely in the form of personality disorder but as part of a new intertwined molecular genetic model of personality and mental disorder. This is the beginning of a new conceptual paradigm. This breakthrough volume marks the beginning of a new era, an era made possible by the electrifying pace of discovery and innovation in the field of molecular genetics. In fact, several types of genome maps have already been completed, and today's experts confidently predict that we will have a smooth version of the sequencing of the human genome which contains some 3 billion base pairs. Such astounding progress helped fuel the development of this remarkable volume, the first ever to discuss the brand new and often controversial field of molecular genetics and the human personality. Questioning critical and strong on methodological principles, this volume reflects the point of view of its 35 distinguished contributors, all pioneers in this burgeoning field and themselves world-class theoreticians, empiricists, clinicians, developmentalists, and statisticians. For students of psychopathology and others bold enough to hold in abeyance their understandable misgivings about the conjunction of molecular genetics and human personality, this work offers an authoritative and up-to-date introduction to the molecular genetics of human personality. The book, with its wealth of facts, conjectures, hopes, and misgivings, begins with a preface by world-renowned researcher and author Irving Gottesman. The authors masterfully guide us through Chapter 1: principles and methods; Chapter 4: animal models for personality; and Chapter 11: human intelligence as a model for personality, laying the groundwork for our appreciation of the remaining empirical findings of human personality qua personality. Many chapters (6, 7, 9, 11, and 13) emphasize the neurodevelopmental and ontogenetic aspects of personality, with a major emphasis on the receptors and transporters for the neurotransmitters dopamine and serotonin. Though these neurotransmitters are a rational starting point, now the future undoubtedly will bring many other candidate genes that today cannot even be imagined, given our ignorance of the genes involved in the prenatal development of the central nervous system. Chapter 3 provides an integrative overview of the broad autism phenotype and as such will be of special interest to child psychiatrists. Chapters 5, 8, and 10 offer enlightening information on drug and alcohol abuse. Chapter 14 discusses variations in sexuality. Adding balance and mature perspectives on how all the chapters complement and sometimes challenge one another are Chapter 2, written by a major figure in the renaissance of the relevance to psychopathology of both genetics and personality; Chapters 15-17, informed critical appraisals citing concerns and cautions about premature applications of this information in the policy arena; and Chapter 18, a judicious contemplation by the editors themselves of this promising and to some alarming field. Clear and meticulously researched, this eminently satisfying work is written to introduce the subject to postgraduate students just beginning to develop their research skills to interested psychiatric practitioners and to informed laypersons with some scientific background

The Structure of Human Personality H. J. Eysenck, 2013-10-31 Originally published in 1953 this third edition was first published in 1970 It was one of the early attempts at bringing together theories of personality organisation and finding empirical evidence to test their hypotheses This third edition includes additional chapters and updated references to current research of the time It is a particular feature of this book that a large number of figures are reproduced in the text this is essentially a consequence of the writer's belief that diagrammatic representations are better suited to the transmitting and remembering of information than are words or numbers The first chapter outlines the theories and discusses some of their implications the second and third look at methods of analysis and projective techniques while the rest of the book is devoted to a critical presentation of the evidence arranged according to the technique employed rating self rating objective testing constitutional assessment autonomic measurement and so on Today it can be read and enjoyed in its historical context

The Nature of Human Personality G. N. M. Tyrrell, 2019-03-04 For over thirty years G N M Tyrrell devoted himself to the study of psychical phenomena Originally published in 1954 in his last book written just before his death he probes as deeply as possible into the meaning of the results of psychical research He believes that paranormal phenomena are not isolated occurrences due to the exceptional gifts of a few unusual persons but the result of capacities which all human beings possess though in widely varying degrees After an introductory chapter on Psychology and Psychiatry the chief psychical phenomena extra sensory perception mediumship apparitions etc are discussed and illustrated Then follows a general criticism of current attitudes towards the subject The book ends with two chapters arguing that the normal and paranormal are one and suggesting a pathway to religion The Psychology of Behaviour Elizabeth Severn, 2015-06-17 Excerpt from The Psychology of Behaviour A Practical Study of Human Personality and Conduct With a Special Reference to Methods of Development The study of man s thoughts feelings and motives is a universally fascinating one Even the least thoughtful of us love to watch and speculate upon our neighbours actions and have sometimes an even greater interest for our own Any extensive or careful analysis however of human nature has been left almost entirely to the great philosophers and moralizers for the very good reason that the common knowledge of the human mind and its springs of action has been too limited and uncertain to allow of any satisfactory conclusions by the layman About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works The Nature Of Human Personality G N M Tyrrell, 2021-09-09 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public To ensure a quality reading experience this work has been proofread and republished using a format that seamlessly blends the original graphical elements with text in an easy to read typeface We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant A Theory of the Human Personality Lisle James Koch, Bernard Kleinman, 1965 The problem of understanding the human personality faces each new generation Everyone has implicit ideas of how and why people behave as they do but to formalize in systematic fashion those ideas is another matter and the problem of personality theorizing This paper has attempted to set forth some basic criteria for developing a theory of personality which includes relevance brevity and clarity internally consistent assumptions and propositions scope and comprehensiveness adequate communication and consideration of individual and group norms This theory of personality attempts to present a real person theory whose personality structure has been divided into three major divisions explicitly state by Christ himself in Matthew 22 37 Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart with all thy mind and with all thy strength 1 Kardia which is the heart containing the seat of man s willing feelings and emotions 2 Psyche which is the soul or life energy principle of man s body spirit and kinesthetic sensing 3 Dianoa which is the full intellect of man which understands makes insightful decisions makes value judgements and possesses a knowledge shared with himself by way of a conscience These structural aspects are structurally similar to Freud s tripartite structure of personality These similarities and many others illustrated in this paper suggest a thread of unity in historical and current conceptualization of what the human personality is and how it behaves and interacts intrapsychically and interpersonally The dynamic overlap and interaction of the concepts also suggest that personality theory must remain a dynamic and evolving discipline in the study of human nature and behavior in as much as it is ever dealing with a changing individual who lives in ever changing situations
