

United States Government

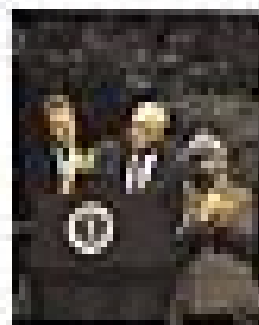

Structure of the Government

The United States is a federal republic. This means that the government is made up of three branches: the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. Each branch has its own powers and responsibilities. The executive branch is headed by the President. The legislative branch is made up of Congress, which includes the House of Representatives and the Senate. The judicial branch is headed by the Supreme Court.

The President is the head of the executive branch. He or she is elected by the people for a four-year term. The President has the power to sign laws, veto bills, and declare war. The Vice President is the second in command of the executive branch.

Congress is the legislative branch. It is made up of two houses: the House of Representatives and the Senate. The House has 435 members, and the Senate has 100 members. Congress has the power to make laws, approve or reject the President's appointments, and declare war.
