The Palladians:

Bright Epoch Andrea G. Radke-Moss, 2008-01-01 With the passage of the Morrill Act in 1862 many states in the Midwest and the West chartered land grant colleges following the Civil War. Because of both progressive ideologies and economic necessity these institutions admitted women from their inception and were among the first public institutions to practice coeducation. Although female students did not feel completely accepted by their male peers and professors in the land grant environment many of them nonetheless successfully negotiated greater gender inclusion for themselves and their peers. In Bright Epoch Andrea G. Radke Moss tells the story of female students' early mixed gender encounters at four institutions: Iowa Agricultural College, the University of Nebraska, Oregon Agricultural College, and Utah State Agricultural College. Although land grant institutions have been most commonly associated with domestic science courses for women, Bright Epoch illuminates the diversity of other courses of study available to female students, including the sciences, literature, journalism, business, commerce, and law. In a culture where the forces of gender separation constantly battled gender inclusion, women found new opportunities for success and achievement through activities such as literary societies, athletics, military regiments, and women's rights and suffrage activism. Through these venues, women students challenged nineteenth century gender limitations and created broader definitions of female inclusion and participation in the land grant environment and in the larger American society.

Sir John Vanbrugh Vaughan Hart, 2008 In explaining why Vanbrugh's buildings look the way they do, Hart allows his novel architectural forms to be understood for the first time as expressions of the visual and psychological theories of his friend and fellow Whig Joseph Addison. BOOK JACKET

The Palladian Revival John Harris, Professor of Bioethics and Applied Philosophy, Director of the Center for Social Ethics and Policy, John Harris, 1994-01-01 In 1726 Richard Boyle, 3rd Earl of Burlington built an addition to his modest country house on the river Thames at Chiswick. The structure was a free standing villa which is the subject of this book. The author explores the villa's architectural inspiration and the evolution of its design.

Fenestration Practice and Theory in Early Modern Europe Hentie Louw, 2024-06-05 This book explores the transformation of the window during the Early Modern Period in Europe. Following the Italian Renaissance, new stylistic norms for modern classical windows had to be invented. Building a new classical repertoire drew on existing traditions in fenestration as local builders throughout Europe struggled with the constraints of varying climatic conditions, customs, and physical resources in pursuit of a broader vision of an international classical revival. With the Renaissance, the architectural emphasis shifted towards secular design and, as the classical revival gained momentum, a quest for a cultured lifestyle commensurate with the new architecture increased demand for sophisticated fenestration systems in civil architecture. The movement coincided with a period of dramatic climate change, the so-called Little Ice Age (c. 1450–c. 1850), adding urgency to the campaign for transforming fenestration practice. By the late seventeenth century, Northern European builders had developed appropriate indigenous classical window forms for their respective societies functional products sophisticated enough to form the basis of new architectural styles northern classical traditions that rivalled and in some respects surpassed those created in Italy Their achievement was embodied in the two flagships of the movement the Franco Italian folding casement the French window and the English mechanical sliding window the sash window
