Ownership in China's Transitional Economy Yang Chen, 2007 This study develops an understanding of the change of ownership and property rights in the context of China in transition and challenges conventional property rights theories which fail to consider the context of the societies in which economic institutions operate

Distance to Frontier, Selection, and Economic Growth Daron Acemoglu, Philippe Aghion, Fabrizio Zilibotti, 2002 We analyze an economy where managers engage both in the adoption of technologies from the world frontier and in innovation activities The selection of high skill managers is more important for innovation activities As the economy approaches the technology frontier selection becomes more important As a result countries at early stages of development pursue an investment based strategy with long term relationships high average size and age of firms large average investments but little selection Closer to the world technology frontier there is a switch to an innovation based strategy with short term relationships younger firms less investment and better selection of managers We show that relatively backward economies may switch out of the investment based strategy too soon so certain economic institutions and policies such as limits on product market competition or investment subsidies that encourage the investment based strategy may be beneficial However societies that cannot switch out of the investment based strategy fail to converge to the world technology frontier Non convergence traps are more likely when policies and institutions are endogenized enabling beneficiaries of existing policies to bribe politicians to maintain these policies Keywords appropriate institutions convergence economic growth innovation imitation political economy of growth selection technical change traps JEL Classifications O31 O33 O38 O40 L16

Working Paper Series, 2003 The Economics of the Hidden Economy Friedrich Schneider, 2008

Economic Papers, 1981 Development Challenges in the 1990s Timothy Besley, Roberto Zagha, 2005 The 1990s was a decade of historical significance with numerous and remarkable changes It was also a time of considerable reforms that strengthened the policy framework in a large number of countries Yet the resulting growth experiences of developing countries have been extremely varied and often below expectations What have we learned from this experience And how can these lessons be applied to the challenges we face in the new millennium Development Challenges in the 1990s brings together the insights and experiences of some of the world's leading policymakers and global thought leaders individuals who have had substantial influence on the policy reforms and development strategies in their native countries. Sharing their unique perspectives, these practitioners of development explain the reasons for the uneven outcomes of the 1990s and, with the benefit of hindsight, draw relevant lessons for the future. Essays by leading global economists cover a wide range of topics from the Washington Consensus as a policy prescription for development to the successes and failures of post-Communist transition countries. Those interested in economics, political science, and international studies will find much to think about in this challenging collection. Contributors include Lawrence H. Summers, Leszek Balcerowicz, James Bradford Long, Kwesi Botchwey, Fernando Henrique Cardoso, Yegor Gaidar, Alejandro Portes, Zhou Xiaochuan, Montek Ahluwalia, John Williamson, Eduardo Aninat, Mario Blejer, and Kemal Dervis.

Corrupt Circles Alfonso W. Quiroz, 2008-11-13. As Peru prosecutes former president Alberto Fujimori and other alleged participants in state crimes, the country's longstanding culture of impunity is under attack, and the subject of corruption has acquired a new prominence both in Peru and in Latin America more broadly. In Corrupt Circles, Alfonso W. Quiroz gives a definitive and thorough history of Peruvian corruption that dates back to the country's colonial period. He demonstrates how corruption has been deeply embedded in Peru's state institutions and has damaged the country's prospects, and he offers a comprehensive estimate of the costs of corruption to the country's development. Far from being a hidden crime, the author finds corruption is well documented throughout Peru's history in the records of its opponents in government, journalism, and diplomacy. The pervasiveness of corruption has been aided by the readiness of both Peruvians and the international community to turn a blind eye.
