Virus Receptors K. Longberg-Holm, 2013-03-09 It is hardly necessary to define the concept of receptors to readers of this series but it should be born in mind that in several instances receptors are undefined entities whose molecular details remain to be established On the other hand the ligand which recognizes the receptors has been identified and characterized in most cases The current interest in the structure and function of biological membranes gives great expectations that in the near future we may understand the details of ligand receptor interaction This interaction involves two defined steps the first usually referred to as recognition is followed by the second step transduction in which the ligand receptor interaction is translated by the cell into a biochemical action The present two volumes which cover prokaryotic and eukaryotic virus receptors have been published together in order to illustrate the specificity of virus receptor recognition which appears to be a guiding principle for both bacteria and higher cells The identification and characterization of the receptors for phages of gram negative bacteria has to a large extent relied on the genetic techniques available for these organisms In a similar way the availability of genetic systems has also clarified the interrelationship between animal retrovirus receptors even if the molecular structure remains to be determined The paucity of defined genetic systems may therefore explain part of our ignorance concerning the molecular details of virus receptors on human cells and possibly also on gram positive bacteria
