MS. REESE MILLER

Hi students! I am Ms. Miller. I am very excited to meet you all. School starts next week, and we have a lot to look forward to. See you in class!

MY BACKGROUND

I have been teaching Grade 6 at this school for 3 years now. I went to Fauget University and have been a teacher since 2017. I am currently taking up my Masters' degree at the same University.

FACTS ABOUT ME

I went to this school as a student, too.
I love to read books.
I teach out of school youth during weekends.
I have a dog named Chi. She is a Daschund.

Learning to Teach in Urban Schools Etta R. Hollins, 2012-03-22 This book about the transition from teacher preparation to teaching practice in urban school settings offers rare insight into how teachers can transform their own practice and in the process transform the culture of schools

Tanzania, Meeting the Employment Challenge ,1991      Resources in Education ,1997      The Physical Educator ,1940      Paperback Plus Teacher's Resource ,1999      A Handbook for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education Heather Fry, Steve Ketteridge, Stephanie Marshall, 2003-12-16 The Handbook is sensitive to the competing demands of teaching research and scholarship and academic management Against the contexts the book focuses on developing professional academic skills for teaching Dealing with the rapid expansion of the use of technology in higher education and widening student diversity the fully updated and expanded edition includes new material on for example e learning lecturing to large groups formative and summative assessment and supervising research students

The Church School Journal ,1895      Controlling Public Education Kathryn A. McDermott, 1999 Most Americans believe that local school districts are the only means by which citizens may exercise control over public education Kathryn McDermott argues to the contrary that existing local institutions are no longer sufficient for achieving either equity or democratic governance Not only is local control inequitable it also fails to live up to its reputation for guaranteeing public participation and citizen influence Drawing upon democratic theory and the results of field research in New Haven Connecticut and three suburbs McDermott contends that our educational system can be made more democratic by centralizing control over funding while decentralizing most authority over schools to the level of schools themselves while enacting public school choice controlled for racial balance To many people in Connecticut and elsewhere the tension between equal opportunity for all students and local control of public education seems impossible to resolve In 1996 the Connecticut Supreme Court ruled in Sheff v O'Neill that local control produces unconstitutional segregation of public schools Nearly all of the state's 169 towns operate their own public schools and like the towns they serve the schools are generally homogeneous with respect to race and socioeconomic class In the Sheff ruling the court declared that making school districts coterminous with town lines is the single most important factor contributing to the present concentration of racial and ethnic minorities in the Hartford public school system At the same time the court also acknowledged that the town based school system presently furthers the legitimate nonracial interests of permitting considerable local control and accountability in educational matters In Connecticut and elsewhere it has often seemed necessary to choose between local control and equity in public education and local control has almost always won McDermott argues that rather than seeing local control and equity as conflicting goals policymakers should regard them as equally important components of democracy in public education In her view a truly democratic system of education should both encourage citizen participation in school governance and contribute to the formation and maintenance of a social order in which equality of opportunity prevails over hierarchies of privilege Centralizing distribution of resources and using controlled choice to end racial isolation would provide greater equality of opportunity while decentralizing management of schools would expand citizen participation McDermott s conclusions break new ground in our understanding of local school governance itself and call into question the conventional wisdom about local participation These findings should interest those who study school governance and reform especially in an urban setting as well as policy makers administrators teachers students and citizens eager to improve their schools      Bulletin California School Boards Association,1953
