Lynn J. Frewer,Einar Risvik,Hendrik Schifferstein,2013-03-09 Food consumption is vital to human survival Nevertheless the exact determinants of food perception liking and food choice are still not fully understood Food People and Society tries to fill some of the gaps in our knowledge by studying these processes from multiple perspectives each with their own emphasis Some approaches focus mainly on the characteristics of food products eaten some focus on the person who eats a particular food whereas other approaches emphasize the psychological economic or social context in which food consumption takes place By bringing together these different approaches in one book we open the opportunity to integrate different perspectives and to facilitate comprehension of the complex processes that drive food choice behaviour Food People and Society is written for a wide audience including students and academics interested in food perception and consumption policy makers health educators and nutritionists food manufacturers and food marketers

A Social-Psychological Perspective on Food-Related Behavior Marta L. Axelson,David Brinberg,2012-12-06 Many of the diseases which afflict people in an affluent society like the United States seem to be related to food consumption e g adult onset diabetes mellitus hyperlipidemia and colon cancer In recent years the health related professions have become aware that their exclusive aim of disease treatment must be expanded to include health promotion Professionals in food and nutrition health education social marketing and psychology as well as others have become interested in finding ways to promote healthy behaviors such as appropriate food consumption patterns To modify food related behavior knowledge about why people eat what they eat is required Both biological and sociocultural factors determine people's consumption behavior This monograph however examines only the sociocultural determinants of individuals food related behaviors within their zone of biological indifference The sociocultural variables are divided into two major categories sociodemographic and psychological Sociodemographic variables are often called external variables and include income ethnicity age and the like Psychosocial variables are thought to reflect the individual's internal state and commonly examined variables include knowledge beliefs and attitudes

Health Promotion For People With Intellectual And Developmental Disabilities Taggart, Laurence,Cousins, Wendy,2014-01-01 This book offers a wide range of health and social care professionals the knowledge and strategies to address key issues enabling and empowering individuals with intellectual disabilities to enjoy healthier lives Sustainable food Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Environmental Audit Committee,2012-05-13 Obesity and diet related illness is on the increase fewer young people are being taught how to cook or grow food and advertisers are targeting kids with junk food ads At the same time the world faces growing fears about food security as the global population increases more people eat meat and dairy and the climate destabilises as a result of forest destruction and fossil fuel use The Committee in summary recommends stricter advertising limits on junk food marketing food skills such as cooking and gardening should be part of the curriculum in all schools new national planning policy guidance for Local Authorities should ensure communities have access to healthy food and land to grow their own produce Government Buying Standards for food must be improved on meat and dairy and extended to cover hospitals prisons and schools the Office of Fair Trading's remit should be amended so supermarkets are not blocked from cooperating on sustainability initiatives and the scope for simple and consistent labelling on the sustainability of food products should be examined The report warns that there is no overarching food strategy in place Defra's Green Food Project due in June examines only part of the food system and the focus on sustainable intensification risks ignoring wider social and health implications The UK does not currently have the basic science base to deliver more sustainable food and relying on markets to identify and to direct where the research is needed is likely to fail An independent body to research GM crops and their impacts should also be established

Conscious and Unconscious Consumer Choice of Food Products Florian Schleicher,2013-12-09 Master's Thesis from the year 2013 in the subject Psychology Work Business Organisation grade 2 3 Technical University of Munich language English abstract When going for grocery shopping some consumers make up their minds about what to buy and write down shopping lists Others just go into the supermarket and do not really think beforehand about the things they need Although in both situations individuals engage in different ways of decision making on the purchase of groceries when coming home and putting things into the shelves they positively or negatively assess the things they bought Whereas in some situations one gets a positive feeling because e.g. s/he purchased all the products on the shopping list In another situation a consumer might end up being bored because s/he just bought the groceries which are perceived as useful and did not listen to his/her inner voice calling for more than just the fulfillment of utilitarian needs Generally consumers can consciously do their purchases and decide for products after thinking on it or can consider a product's attributes and let their intuition decide In the interest of the consumer the question emerges how the consumer decides at best Does a consumer receive greater satisfaction from consciously elaborating about the products s/he is facing or is it better not to think consciously when facing product choices This question is differently assessed by different models on decision making Whereas some authors Ajzen 2011 Bandura 1986

1997 Deci Payne et al 1993 emphasize consciousness in decision making there is also a large number of proponents of unconscious thought Dijksterhuis 2004 Dijksterhuis et al 2005 2006a 2006b 2006c Levine 1996 Bargh 2002 and Wilson et al 1993 Dijksterhuis and Nordgren 2006b p 96 argue for the superiority of unconscious decision making by mentioning that conscious thought is constrained by the low capacity of consciousness which results in sub optimal choices With regard to food products this general superiority of unconscious thought is highly questionable On the one hand consumers constrain themselves in taking into account only specific products which respect certain criteria as e g with diabetics and food products with less sugar content On the other hand food products are also bought because consumers want to confirm their conscience by purchasing e g fair trade products which among other things are associated with a fair payment of farmers

Navigating the Social World Mahzarin R. Banaji, Susan A. Gelman, 2013-03-26 Navigating the social world requires sophisticated cognitive machinery that although present quite early in crude forms undergoes significant change across the lifespan This book will be the first to report on evidence that has accumulated on an unprecedented scale showing us what capacities for social cognition are present at birth and early in life and how these capacities develop through learning in the first years of life The volume will highlight what is known about the discoveries themselves but also what these discoveries imply about the nature of early social cognition and the methods that have allowed these discoveries what is known concerning the phylogeny and ontogeny of social cognition To capture the full depth and breadth of the exciting work that is blossoming on this topic in a manner that is accessible and engaging the editors invited 70 leading researchers to develop a short report of their work that would be written for a broad audience The purpose of this format was for each piece to focus on a single core message are babies aware of what is right and wrong why do children have the same implicit intergroup preferences that adults do what does language do to the building of category knowledge and so on The unique format and accessible writing style will be appealing to graduate students and researchers in cognitive psychology developmental psychology and social psychology
