Tackling inequalities in life expectancy in areas with the worst health and deprivation Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts, 2010-11-02 This report examines why the Department of Health had failed to meet its health inequalities target the role of GPs and the lessons of this for the new NHS Inequalities in health outcomes between the most affluent and disadvantaged members of society are longstanding deep seated and have proved difficult to change In 2004 the Government set the Department the target of reducing the gap in life expectancy between 70 spearhead local authorities with high deprivation and the population as a whole by 10 per cent by 2010 The Department has not met this target and has been exceptionally slow to tackle health inequalities It is of great concern that inequality in health has increased and that the Department took nine years to establish tackling inequalities as an NHS priority GPs are crucial to improving the health of people in the most deprived areas However in many of these areas the number of GPs per head of population is well below the number in more affluent areas The Department missed an opportunity to use the revised GP contract to ensure more doctors work in deprived areas and has not focused their attention sufficiently on implementing the key interventions that would make a difference Equity and Excellence Liberating the NHS Cm 7881 ISBN 9780101788120 set out the Government's long term vision for the NHS but it is important that tackling health inequalities does not slip down the Department's agenda whilst the proposed changes are introduced Tackling Inequality R. Layard, 1999-03-22 Richard Layard is one of Britain's foremost applied economists whose work has had a profound impact on the policy debate in Britain and abroad This book contains his most influential articles on education equality and income distribution and on the lessons of economic transition in Eastern Europe It is published along with a companion volume Inequality argues that lifetime inequality is the basic inequality we should worry about In this context education is a powerful instrument of redistribution as well as a national investment Cash redistribution has efficiency costs which can be calculated but it may also serve to discourage inefficient over work arising from each person's efforts to earn more than his neighbour A final series of essays is based on Layard's recent work on reform strategies in Russia and Poland The book opens with Richard Layard's personal credo Why I became an economist Tackling Inequalities in Brazil, China, India and South Africa The Role of Labour Market and Social Policies OECD, 2010-10-21 This book focuses on the role of growth and employment unemployment developments in explaining recent income inequality trends in Brazil China India and South Africa and discusses the roles played by labour market and social policies in both shaping and addressing these inequalities

Tackling inequalities in life expectancy in areas with the worst health and deprivation Great Britain: National Audit Office, 2010-07-02 The Department of Health has made a serious attempt to tackle health inequalities across England But having set a target in 2000 to reduce health inequalities it took time to embed the issue in the policy and planning framework of the NHS and to develop an evidence base of the most cost effective interventions Although life expectancy overall has increased the gap in life expectancy between the national average and the Government's dedicated spearhead areas has continued to widen The Department will not meet its target to reduce the health inequalities gap by 10 per cent by 2010 as measured by life expectancy at birth if current trends continue The Department's strategy lacked effective mechanisms to achieve the target because the evidence base was still being developed Three key cost effective interventions to reduce the gap in life expectancy were identified by the Health Inequalities Intervention Tool increase the prescribing first of drugs to control blood pressure and second of drugs to reduce cholesterol by 40 per cent and double the capacity of smoking cessation services But these interventions have not yet been used on the scale required Primary care trusts are required to address health inequalities from within their general budgets and it is not possible to identify how much money has been spent PCTs in spearhead areas had 230 more per head to spend than the PCTs in non spearheads but there is evidence that some of the extra money is absorbed by higher hospital costs in deprived areas Inequality - the
