Syria and Egypt William Matthew Flinders Petrie, 1898      Syria and Egypt W. M. Flinders Petrie, 2015-06-26 Excerpt from Syria and Egypt From the Tell El Amarna Letters During the age of the decline of Egyptian power in Syria when the great conquests of Tahutmes I were all gradually lost a splendid store of information was laid by for us in the cuneiform correspondence at Tell el Amarna The clay tablets mostly from Syria but with a few duplicates of letters from Egypt were deposited in The place of the records of the palace of the king as it is called upon the stamped bricks which I found still remaining there A few years ago the natives while plundering about the ruins and carrying off Akhenaten s bricks for their modern houses lit upon this record chamber containing many hundreds of tablets About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works      Syria and Egypt from the Tell El Amarna Letters William Matthew Flinders Petrie, 2004      Syria and Egypt Sir William Matthew Flinders Petrie, William Matthew Flinders Petrie, 1978      Syria and Egypt W. M. Flinders Petrie, 2017-10-12 Excerpt from Syria and Egypt From the Tell El Amarna Letters 2 With regard to transliteration I have departed from the system used by Winckler not without good reason The rage for employing out of the way and little known symbols in place of effective letters which are understood threatens to place historical and linguistic works as much outside of the ordinary reader s pronunciation as a set of About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works      Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain & Ireland Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, 1898 Has appendices      Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland , 1898      The Tell-el-Amarna-letters , 1896      The Tell El Amarna Period Carl Niebuhr, As early as 1820 it was known in Europe that in Middle Egypt on the east bank of the Nile in the district between Minieh and Siut there lay the remains of a great city of Ancient Egypt The Prussian exploration expedition of 1842-45 gave special attention to this site where indeed were found about sixty miles south of Minieh extensive ruins beginning at the village of Haggi Kandil and covering the floor of a rock bound valley named after the fellahin village El Amarna At that time the ground plan of the city was still easy to distinguish the regular lines of the streets could be traced and enough could be seen of the great design of the principal temple to excite the admiration of the discoverers This example of the laying out of an ancient Egyptian town still remains almost unique for of old as now private buildings were constructed of flimsy material That the Tell el Amarna remains have escaped rapid destruction is due entirely to the sudden and violent downfall of the original splendour of the city and the complete desolation which succeeded The importance of the place was revealed on examination of the surrounding cliffs Here were found sculptured and inscribed in a new and peculiar style the rock cut tombs of the most distinguished inhabitants of Akhet haten the royal city built for himself about 1380 B C by Amenophis IV and destroyed soon after his early death In the beginning of 1888 some fellah n digging for marl not far from the ruins came upon a number of crumbling wooden chests filled with clay tablets closely covered on both sides with writing The dusky fellows must have been not a little delighted at finding themselves owners of hundreds of these marketable antiquities for which a European purchaser would doubtless give plenty of good gold coins To multiply their gains they broke up the largest tablets into three or four separate pieces often to the grievous hindrance of the future decipherer But very soon the matter was fruited abroad the Government at once intervened almost all the find was in due time secured and a stop was put to any further dispersal of separate tablets and of fragments The political situation in Egypt is pretty accurately indicated by the fact that about eighty of the best preserved of the Tell el Amarna tablets at once found their way to the British Museum Some sixty were left in the museum at Boulak and about one hundred and eighty were secured for the Berlin Museum many of them tiny fragments but mostly containing important records Few have remained in private hands Some alabaster slabs came to light at Tell el Amarna bearing the hieroglyphic names of King Amenophis IV and his father Amenophis III These had evidently served as lids to the chests Some tablets also were inscribed with notes in hieratic written in red ink But in spite of these exceptions it was at once recognised that all the documents were written in Babylonian cuneiform The reading of the introductory lines on various tablets served to show that the find consisted of part of the Egyptian state archives in the times of the two kings Amenophis III and IV Thus the first of the many startling discoveries that were to follow in such rapid succession was made in the recognition that about 1400 B C the Semitic speech of Babylon served as the language of diplomacy in the East Apart from a few tablets dealing with mythological subjects and written in Babylonian and two which contain inventories all the tablets were letters Most of them were from Egyptian officials in Syria and Canaan and usually they were addressed to the king Among them were found many long letters from Asiatic kings to the Egyptian monarch and also a few communications from the Foreign Office of Pharaoh himself We must note however that this title of Egyptian kings so commonly used in the Old Testament is apparently never once employed in the Tell el Amarna documents It is interesting to observe how difficulties of the script and of a language not entirely familiar to most of the scribes were overcome Even the learned scribes of the royal House of the Sun in Egypt had obviously their own troubles in the matter and made use of the Babylonian mythological texts already mentioned as a means of improving their fluency Of this we have evidence in the thin red lines by which on these tablets alone the words have been separated from each other The governors and officials must not be classified as educated or uneducated on the evidence of their letters all alike employed professional scribes of whom one might be skilful and the next a bungler whose communications must be guessed at rather than read Occasionally a Babylonian word is followed by the corresponding Canaanite word also in cuneiform but marked as a translation Like the Egyptian kings so the Asiatic sovereigns had each his staff of scribes One of the petty chiefs Tarkhundarash of Arsapi was evidently so unhappy as to have none in his Court who could read or write a letter in Babylonian for letters to him were written in his own tongue The scribe of the Hittite king produced only a species of dog Latin while the scribe of the king of Alashia trots out his whole vocabulary unhampered by grammar On the other hand the letters of the king of Mitani are drawn up in the characters known as Assyrian and it is probable that the Assyrian system of cuneiform may have originated in Mitani If so for the Mitani scribe there could be no question of any special difficulty in using the acknowledged language of diplomacy in the Ancient East
