Death and Memory in Early Medieval Britain Howard Williams, 2006-08-31 How were the dead remembered in early medieval Britain Originally published in 2006 this innovative study demonstrates how perceptions of the past and the dead and hence social identities were constructed through mortuary practices and commemoration between c 400 1100 AD Drawing on archaeological evidence from across Britain including archaeological discoveries Howard Williams presents a fresh interpretation of the significance of portable artefacts the body structures monuments and landscapes in early medieval mortuary practices He argues that materials and spaces were used in ritual performances that served as technologies of remembrance practices that created shared social memories intended to link past present and future Through the deployment of material culture early medieval societies were therefore selectively remembering and forgetting their ancestors and their history Throwing light on an important aspect of medieval society this book is essential reading for archaeologists and historians with an interest in the early medieval period

Bodies, Beings, and the Multiple Burial Rite of the Western Viking World Claire F. Ratican, 2024-09-25 This book explores multiple burials the presence of more than one individual within a grave within the Viking Age mortuary landscape throughout Scandinavia and the lands of their westward diaspora Even though a number of spectacular examples have captured the imagination of professionals and the public alike multiple burials have not been the subject of dedicated and systematic archaeological investigation By adopting a perspective grounded in relationality and an analysis that centres on three types of beings humans animals and things this book explores the ways in which each being entered into entangled relationships with the other thereby mutually constituting the nature of their existence in Viking Age minds For the first time the corpus of Viking Age multiple burials located across the lands of the Western Scandinavian diaspora and their counterparts in the urban trading centres of Kaupang Norway and Hedeby formerly Denmark is synthesised into a single study firmly situating the multiple burial rite within the wider suite of normative burial practices observed across the Viking World The book meaningfully engages with a developing discourse in the Scandinavian tradition increasingly revealing the fluidity of being across human animal and thing bodies in Iron Age mentalities and material culture Ultimately it poses the question are humans animals and things similar forms of bodies and beings in the Viking World This book will appeal to students and researchers of death and burial in the Viking World

Science and Technology in Homeric Epics S. A. Paipetis, 2008-10-22 In the Homeric Epics important references to specific autonomous systems and mechanisms of very advanced technology such as automata and artificial intelligence as well as to almost modern methods of design and production are included Even if those features of Homeric science were just poetic concepts which on many occasions does not explain the astonishing details of design and manufacture like the ones included in the present volume they seem to prove that these achievements were well within human capability In addition the substantial development of machine theory during the early post Homeric age shows that the Homeric descriptions were a kind of prophetic conception of these machines and scientific research must be a quest for the fundamental principles of knowledge available during the Late Bronze Age and the dawn of the Iron Age Such investigations must of necessity be strongly interdisciplinary and also proceed continuously in time since as science progresses new elements of knowledge are discovered in the Homeric Epics amenable to scientific analysis This book brings together papers presented at the international symposium Science and Technology in Homeric Epics which took place at Ancient Olympia in 2006 It includes a total of 41 contributions mostly original research papers covering diverse fields of science and technology in the modern sense of these words
