State of New York on August twenty fifth 1836 By his relatives and early friends he was called Frank but soon after beginning his career as an author in San Francisco he signed his name as Brett then as Bret and finally as Bret Harte Bret Harte therefore is in some degree a nom de guerre and it was commonly supposed at first both in the Eastern States and in England to be wholly such Our great New England novelist had a similar experience for Nathaniel Hawthorne was long regarded by most of his readers as an assumed name happily chosen to indicate the quaint and poetic character of the tales to which it was signed Bret Harte's father was Henry Hart but before we trace his ancestry let us endeavor to see how he looked Fanny Kemble met him at Lenox in the year 1875 and was much impressed by his appearance In a letter to a relative she wrote He reminded me a good deal of our old pirate and bandit friend Trelawney though the latter was an almost orientally dark complexioned man and Mr Bret Harte was comparatively fair They were both tall well made men of fine figure both too were handsome with a peculiar expression of face which suggested small success to any one who might engage in personal conflict with them In reality Bret Harte was not tall though others beside Mrs Kemble thought him to be so his height was five feet eight and a half inches His face was smooth and regular without much color the chin firm and well rounded the nose straight and rather large the nose of generosity and genius the under lip having what Mr Howells called a fascinating forward thrust The following description dates from the time when he left California He was a handsome distinguished looking man and although his oval face was slightly marred by scars of small pox and his abundant dark hair was already streaked with gray he carried his slight upright figure with a quiet elegance that would have made an impression even when the refinement of face voice and manner had not been recognized Mr Howells says of him at the same period He was as one could not help seeing thickly pitted but after the first glance one forgot this so that a lady who met him for the first time could say to him Mr Harte aren't you afraid to go about in the cars so recklessly when there is this scare about small pox No madam he said in that rich note of his with an irony touched by pseudo pathos I bear a charm d life Almost every one who met Bret Harte was struck by his low rich well modulated voice Mr Howells speaks of the mellow cordial of a voice that was like no other His handwriting was small firm and graceful The Life of Bret Harte T. impossible to separate substance from style The style is so good so exactly adapted to the ideas which he wishes to convey that one can hardly imagine it as different Some thousands of years ago an Eastern sage remarked that he would like to write a book such as everybody would conceive that he might have written himself and yet so good that nobody else could have written the like This is the ideal which Bret Harte fulfilled Almost everything said by any one of his characters is so accurate an expression of that character as to seem inevitable It is felt at once to be just what such a character must have said Given the character the words follow and anybody could set them down This is the fallacy underlying that strange feeling which every reader must have experienced of the apparent easiness of writing an especially good conversation or soliloquy The real difficulty of writing like Bret Harte is shown by the fact that as a story teller he has no imitators His I style is so individual as to make imitation impossible And yet occasionally the inspiration failed It is a peculiarity of Bret Harte shown especially in the longer stories and most of all perhaps in Gabriel Conroy that there are times when the reader almost believes that Bret Harte has dropped the pen and some inferior person has taken it up Author and reader come to the ground with a thud Mr Warren Cheney has remarked upon this defect as follows With most authors there is a level of general excellence along which they can plod if the wings of genius chance to tire for a time but with Mr Harte the case is a different one His powers are impulsive rather than enduring Ideas strike
