Speeches Debates And Interviews 1864 1880:

Marx, Tocqueville, and Race in America August H. Nimtz, 2003 While Alexis de Tocqueville described America as the absolute democracy Karl Marx saw the nation as a defiled republic so long as it permitted the enslavement of blacks In this insightful political history Nimtz argues that Marx and his partner Frederick Engels had a far more acute and insightful reading of American democracy than Tocqueville because they recognized that the overthrow of slavery and the cessation of racial oppression were central to its realization Nimtz's account contrasts both the writings and the civil action of Tocqueville Marx and Engels noting that Marx and Engels actively mobilized the German American community in opposition to the slavocracy prior to the Civil War and that Marx heavily supported the Union cause This potent and insightful investigation into the approaches of two major thinkers provides fresh insight into past and present debates about race and democracy in America

A History of Memorial Day Richard P. Harmond, Thomas J. Curran, 2002 A History of Memorial Day is a study of how Memorial Day was viewed by many Americans as a vehicle of both national and international unity However this study also examines the surprising amount of controversy elicited by the celebration of Memorial Day finding that a substantial number of Americans value Memorial Day more as a holiday from work and an occasion for recreation and relaxation than as a time to honor the country's fallen heroes

The Scholar, 2004

Mistress of Manifest Destiny Linda S. Hudson, 2001

Jane McManus Storm Cazneau 1807 1878 was a complex person who died at sea the way she lived at the center of a storm of controversy Whether as Aaron Burr's mistress land speculating in Texas behind enemy lines during the Mexican War filibustering for Cuba or Nicaragua promoting Mexican revolution from a dugout in Eagle Pass or urging free blacks to emigrate to the Dominican Republic Cazneau seldom took the easy path She foresaw a nation with equal rights for all in a world in which representative government was the norm rather than the exception As a journalist an advisor to national political figures and publicist she helped shape United States domestic and foreign policy from the mid 1840s into the 1870s Cazneau's most unique contribution was as a staff writer for John L O Sullivan editor of the United States Magazine and Democratic Review where she described the mission of the United States as Manifest Destiny thereby coining one of the most significant and influential phrases in American political history A single parent and working mother Cazneau was not a women's rights woman who agitated for suffrage She ridiculed the Seneca Falls housewives complaints because real oppression existed for women in the factories in the needle trades on Indian reservations and in the Caribbean Cazneau advised working women to educate themselves and take better paying men's clerical jobs Although it appeared that her schemes and speculations failed many of the policies she advocated eventually succeeded She promoted the need for a steam navy and merchant marine fifty years before Alfred T Mahan She wrote about the problems of the working class sixty years before it became a Progressive crusade advocated agrarian reform fifty years before Populists took up the cause and assisted republican revolutionaries a hundred years before the United States awoke to the needs of the ordinary people in the sister republics of the Western Hemisphere Cazneau's letters, books, journal and newspaper articles leave little more than a hint of her intelligence and conversational wit, a mere suggestion of her sexuality and explosive temper, a glimpse of her courage and spirituality and a trace of her sense of humor reflected in the sparkle of violet eyes beneath raven hair and a dark complexion that was her distinguishing trait. She was dedicated to the expansion of republican government; she had a special place in her heart for the abandoned and neglected, whether persons or animals, and she had a deep and abiding love for her country and faith in its people and in its future.

Great Events from History John L. Loos, 1997. Covers the entire history of North America. Encyclopedia of African American History 1619-1895 Paul Finkelman, 2006. Publisher Description. Racial and Ethnic Relations in America: Ethnic entrepreneurship Carl Leon Bankston, 2000. Volume 2. Antislavery Discourse and Nineteenth-Century American Literature Julie Husband, 2010-01-15. Antislavery Discourse and Nineteenth Century American Literature examines the relationship between antislavery texts and emerging representations of free labor in mid nineteenth century America. Husband shows how the images of families split apart by slavery circulated primarily by women; leaders proved to be the most powerful weapon in the antislavery cultural campaign and ultimately turned the nation against slavery. She also reveals the ways in which the sentimental narratives and icons that constituted the family protection campaign powerfully influenced Americans' sense of the role of government, gender and race in industrializing America. Chapters examine the writings of ardent abolitionists such as Frederick Douglass, non activist sympathizers and those actively hostile to but deeply immersed in antislavery activism including Nathaniel Hawthorne.
