lady of the demi monde provided she has the courage to face her situation calmly in the morning hours not thinking it necessary to stun herself all day long with noise drink affectations and the strumming of unmusical tunes on some unmusical instrument For the man or woman condemned by circumstances either to a life of monotonous drudgery or to one of dreary idleness or to a still more dreary round of so called social duties which are not really due to anyone and of so called social pleasures which do not please For the man who knows he has something to tell the world but has not found his way to any adequate mode of utterance For the paralytic confined to his chair For the felon confined in a gaol And last and chiefly for the patient in the lunatic asylum For any and all who have temporarily or finally drifted out of the main current of social life into some stagnant and perhaps muddy backwater Whoever the reader is he or she will find the understanding of the book much facilitated by interposing at least one night between the end of one chapter and the beginning of the next Dear friends never suppose that because you yourselves are unable to swim in mid channel therefore you are cut off from the great joy of delivering your message to your fellow men and women Thoughts are facts and they can pass through barriers impenetrable to human bodies Let me help you if I can to understand yourselves If you once do that believe me you will somehow succeed in getting the world to understand you      ...Collected Works...
