The French Counterrevolutionary Theorist Louis De Bonald 1754 1840 Vol 18 Studies In Modern European History:

The French Counterrevolutionary Theorist, Louis de Bonald (1754-1840) David Klinck, 1996 This examination of the life and thought of Louis de Bonald 1754 1840 one of the foremost theorists of the French Counterrevolution challenges the commonly held view that he was a defender of a traditional social order and of a pre scientific way of thinking This study shows that Bonald argued on behalf of the idea of the unlimited power of the state over groups and individuals prefiguring fascism It demonstrates that his organicistic view of society which he developed in opposition to the Cartesian idea of the subject placed Bonald within the French social science tradition extending from Saint Simon to Foucault

Spaemann's Philosophy of the Human Person Holger Zaborowski, 2010-02-04 The German philosopher Robert Spaemann provides an important contribution to a number of contemporary debates in philosophy and theology opening up possibilities for conversation between these disciplines He engages in a dialogue with classical and contemporary positions and often formulates important and original insights which lie beyond common alternatives In this study Holger Zaborowski provides an analysis of the most important features of Spaemann's philosophy and shows the unity of his thought The question Who is a person is of increasing significance Are all human beings persons Are there animals that can be considered persons What does it mean to speak of personal identity and of the dignity of the person Spaemann provides an answer to these questions Every human being he argues is a person and therefore has his nature in freedom In order to understand the person Spaemann explains we have to think about the relation between nature and freedom and avoid the reductive accounts of this relation prevalent in important strands of modern thought Spaemann develops a challenging critique of modernity incorporating analysis of modern anti modernisms and showing that these are also subject to a dialectical development perpetuating the problematic shortcomings of many features of modern reasoning If we do not want to abolish ourselves as persons Spaemann reasons we need to find a way of understanding ourselves that evades the dialectic of modernity Thus he reminds his readers of self evident knowledge insights that we have once already known but tend to forget

Critics of the Enlightenment Christopher Olaf Blum, 2004 For the Anglo American world Edmund Burke is the touchstone of counter revolutionary thought but in this volume Christopher Olaf Blum shows that in attempting to vindicate the principles that had at its best animated the Old Regime and in critiquing the institutions and beliefs associated with the New Regime the French counter revolutionary tradition is unparalleled To understand adequately what Georges Bernanos called the spiritual drama of Europe it is a tradition that must be grappled with Critics of the Enlightenment makes available new translations of representative selections from some of the leading French conservative thinkers of the nineteenth century Franois de Chateaubriand Louis de Bonald Joseph de Maistre Frederic Le Play Emile Keller and Rene de La Tour du Pin The selections span much of the nineteenth century from Chateaubriand s 1814 pamphlet against Bonaparte to La Tour du Pin s 1883 essay on the theory of the corporate state The volume therefore not only includes responses of the French conservatives to the French Revolutions of 1789 through 1815 but also testifies to the continuing elaboration of this critique against the background of the troubled nineteenth century Blum s introduction sets these selections within the contexts of the events giving rise to them and the lives of their authors The French political philosopher Philippe Beneton supplies the book s foreword Blum s elegant translations of texts heretofore difficult or impossible to find in English allow Anglophone readers to profit from the counter revolutionaries insights about social and cultural matters of perennial importance such as the necessary roles of religion family and local communities within any larger political society matters of pressing concern to the counter revolutionaries of our own time
