The Little Phoenix Who Brought Fortune Curran Weis, During a year of snow and famine little three year old Fubao was struck on the head with a rock by her cruel brother leaving her gravely injured and on the verge of death Her adoptive father coldly sneered One less fool means one less mouth to feed Her sharp tongued adoptive mother chimed in Sell her to the traffickers and at least we ll get some money To rid themselves of this burden the couple didn t hesitate to split from the family and move away in the middle of the night But just as Fubao lay bleeding her divine consciousness finally fused with her body She was no ordinary child she was once a young phoenix of the Heavenly Realm carrying with her the Phoenix Feather Space granaries filled with rice wild game practically throwing themselves at her door While her adoptive parents discarded her like weeds the rest of the family cherished her like a treasure Her lame grandfather sold land just to buy her medicine Her five older brothers gaunt with hunger fed her the last spoonful of porridge As long as little sister is full we re not hungry On the road fleeing famine Fubao healed with her left hand struck down villains with her right and step by step raised her family from starving beggars to the wealthiest household Later her former adoptive parents and their brood starving so badly they gnawed on tree bark knelt outside the grand Chu family estate wailing Fubao please just give us a bite to eat Fubao smiled sweetly and handed them a steaming bowl of porridge Here this Guanyin soil will keep you nice and full
