The Livelihood Of Kin Making Ends Meet The Kentucky Way:

The Livelihood of Kin Rhoda H. Halperin, 1990-12-01 Rural Appalachians in Kentucky call it The Kentucky Way making a living by doing many kinds of paid and unpaid work and sharing their resources within extended family networks In fact these strategies are practiced by rural people in many parts of the world but they have not been studied extensively in the United States In The Livelihood of Kin Rhoda Halperin undertakes a detailed exploration of this complex family oriented economy showing how it promotes economic well being and a sense of identity for the people who follow it Using actual life and work histories Halperin shows how people make a living in between the cash economy of the city and the agricultural subsistence economy of the country In regionally based three generation kin networks family members work individually and jointly at many tasks small scale agricultural production food processing and storage odd jobs selling used and new goods in marketplaces and wage labor much of which is temporary People can make ends meet even in the face of job layoffs and declining crop subsidies With these strategies people win a considerable degree of autonomy and control over their lives Halperin also examines how such multiple livelihood strategies define individual identity by emphasizing a person's role in the family network over an occupation She reveals through psychiatric case histories what damage can result when individuals leave the family network for wage employment in the cities as increasing urbanization has forced many people to do While certainly of interest to scholars of Appalachian studies this lively and readable study will also be important for economic anthropologists and urban and rural sociologists

Practicing Community Rhoda H. Halperin, 2015-01-28 Cincinnati's East End river community has been home to generations of working class people This racially mixed community has roots that reach back as far as seven generations But the community is vulnerable Developers bulldoze raggedy but affordable housing to build upscale condos even as East Enders fight to preserve the community by participating in urban development planning controlled by powerful outsiders This book portrays how East Enders practice the preservation of community Drawing on more than six years of anthropological research and advocacy in the East End Rhoda Halperin argues for redefining community not merely as a place but as a set of culturally embedded and class marked practices that give priority to caring for children and the elderly procuring livelihood and providing support for family friends and neighbors These practices create the structures of community within the larger urban power structure Halperin uses different genres to weave the voices of East Enders throughout the book Poems and narratives offer poignant insights into the daily struggles against impersonal market forces that work against the struggle for livelihood This firsthand account questions commonly held assumptions about working class people In a fresh way it reveals the cultural construction of marginality from the viewpoints of both real East Enders and the urban power structure

The Anthropology of Postindustrialism Ismael Vaccaro, Krista Harper, Seth Murray, 2015-10-08 This volume explores how mechanisms of postindustrial capitalism affect places and people in peripheral regions and de industrializing cities While studies of globalization tend to emphasize localities newly connected to global systems this collection in contrast analyzes the disconnection of communities away from the market presenting a range of ethnographic case studies that scrutinize the framework of this transformative process analyzing new social formations that are emerging in the voids left behind by the de industrialization and introducing a discussion on the potential impacts of the current economic and ecological crises on the hyper mobile model that has characterized this recent phase of global capitalism and spatially uneven development

Cultural Economies Past and Present Rhoda H. Halperin, 2010-07-05 When anthropologists and other students of culture want to compare different societies in such areas as the organization of land labor trade or barter they often discover that individual researchers use these concepts inconsistently and from a variety of theoretical approaches so that data from one society cannot be compared with data from another In this book Rhoda Halperin offers an analytical tool kit for studying economic processes in all societies and at all times She uniquely organizes the book around key concepts economy ecology equivalencies householding storage and time and the economy These concepts are designed to facilitate the understanding of similarities differences and changes between contemporary and past economies While this is not only a how to book or handbook it can be used as such It will be of great value to scholars and students of archaeology and history as well as to ethnographers and economists
