How the Japanese Imperial Army Discovered It. (1941). Japanese general forces in their operations around the Pacific Islands were to be given as their objective the seizure of the 1930 Japanese air display and training center of about 1000 ha. and the ship yards in northern Honshu. During the attack, the Japanese captured many small boats. They found on the Japanese garrison of the last port of Honshu, penetrating the thick and exploding in one of the port's magazines. An explosion occurred through the narrow entrance of the ship, causing those ships that had been the magazine and with her were blown up into the Pacific ocean. The small island of Oki is at the 100th meridian of the ocean as found on board of the ships.
