*EXPLANATORY NOTE: The Articles of Confederation were finally agreed upon in Congress two years after independence, but not ratified by all the States until 1781. Often called "The First Constitution of the United States", the document was more akin to a treaty among the thirteen states. The Continental Congress became the Confederation Congress and continued to govern much as it had before, without executive and judicial branches of government. The Articles of Confederation limited the United States into a loose union of seven central states. A meeting in Congress was finally persuaded that the Articles of Confederation proved to be one of the worst ones in Congress.
