Teaching College Writing:

College Writing and Beyond Anne Beaufort, 2007-02-15 Composition research consistently demonstrates that the social context of writing determines the majority of conventions any writer must observe. Still, most universities organize the required first year composition course as if there were an intuitive set of general writing skills usable across academic and work world settings. In College Writing and Beyond: A New Framework for University Writing Instruction, Anne Beaufort reports on a longitudinal study comparing one student's experience in FYC in history in engineering and in his post college writing. Her data illuminate the struggle of college students to transfer what they learn about general writing from one context to another. Her findings suggest ultimately not that we must abolish FYC but that we must go beyond even genre theory in reconceiving it. Accordingly, Beaufort would argue that the FYC course should abandon its hope to teach a sort of general academic discourse and instead should systematically teach strategies of responding to contextual elements that impinge on the writing situation. Her data urge attention to issues of learning transfer and to developmentally sound linkages in writing instruction within and across disciplines. Beaufort advocates special attention to discourse community theory for its power to help students perceive and understand the context of writing. The College Writing Toolkit Martha C.

Pennington, Pauline Burton, 2011. The Toolkit provides a collection of tried and tested methods and techniques for eliciting and working on students writing in a college or university environment. Contributors from all over the world reflect on best practices for teaching writing and for generating writing assignments that help college or university students to learn and to express themselves with confidence, clarity, and originality and in a range of genres. Teaching College Writing to Diverse Student Populations Dana Ferris, 2009-06-02 Statistical and anecdotal evidence documents that even states with relatively little ethnic or cultural diversity are beginning to notice and ask questions about long term resident immigrants in their classes. As shifts in student population become more widespread, there is an even greater need for second language specialists, composition specialists, program administrators and developers in colleges and universities to understand and adapt to the needs of the changing student audience. This book is designed as an introduction to the topic of diverse second language student audiences in U.S. post secondary education. It is appropriate for those interested in working with students in academic settings, especially those students who are transitioning from secondary to post secondary education. It provides a coherent synthesis and summary not only of the scope and nature of the changes but of their practical implications for program administration, course design and classroom instruction, particularly for writing courses. For pre service teachers and those new to the field of working with L2 student writers, it offers an accessible and focused look at the audience issues with many practical suggestions. For teacher educators and administrators, it offers a resource that can inform their own decision making. Something Old, Something New Wendy Bishop, 1990-03-05 How do college writing teachers learn new ways to teach? Most current composition research focuses almost exclusively on student writers, ignoring the role the teacher plays in classroom development Here is the first book to focus on college writing teachers and the ways in which they are affected by graduate rhetoric pedagogy courses Wendy Bishop observed teachers enrolled in a doctoral seminar titled Teaching Basic Writing and then conducted case studies of five of those teachers in their college writing classrooms to investigate how their teaching practices changed and how their previous professional and personal histories influenced their ability to make those changes

Lazy Virtues Robert E. Cummings, 2009 Winner of the MLA s Mina P Shaughnessy Prize for an outstanding work in the fields of language culture literacy or literature with strong application to the teaching of English Focusing largely on the controversial website Wikipedia the author explores the challenges confronting teachers of college writing in the increasingly electronic and networked writing environments their students use every day Rather than praising or condemning that site for its role as an encyclopedia Cummings instead sees it as a site for online collaboration between writers and a way to garner audience for student writing Applying an understanding of Commons Based Peer Production theory as developed by Yochai

Benkler this text is arranged around the following propositions Commons Based Peer Production is a novel economic phenomenon which informs our current teaching model and describes a method for making sense of future electronic developments College writers are motivated to do their best work when they write for an authentic audience external to the class Writing for a networked knowledge community invites students to participate in making knowledge rather than only consuming it A plan for integrating networked writing for an external audience helps students understand the transition from high school to college writing Allowing students to review and self select points of entry into electronic discourse fosters laziness or a new work dynamic where writers seek to better understand their own creativity in terms of a project s demands Lazy Virtues offers networked writing assignments to foster development of student writers by exposing them to the demands of professional audiences asking them to identify and assess their own creative impulses in terms of a project s needs and removing the writing teacher from the role of sole audience Successful College Writing Kathleen T.
