The book examines both the lawfulness of unilateral sanctions and the limitations within which they should operate. In doing so it includes an analysis of State practice the provisions of various international legal instruments dealing with such sanctions and their impact on other areas of international law such as freedom of navigation aviation and transit and the principles of international trade investment regional economic integration and the protection of human rights and the environment. This study finds that unilateral sanctions by a state or a group of states against another state as opposed to smart or targeted sanctions of limited scope would be unlawful unless they meet the procedural and substantive requirements stipulated in international law. Importantly the book identifies and consolidates these requirements scattered in different areas of international law including the additional rules of customary international law that have emerged out of the recent practice of States and that increase the limitations on the use of unilateral sanctions    Consumers Union Reports
