

Documentary Research Strategy to Research Canada

Documentary Research: Ethnographic ethnography	1. Research aims Documentary Research aims to explore and understand the experiences of individuals and groups in a particular social context. This is achieved through the collection and analysis of documents, which are defined as any written or recorded material that provides information about a particular topic or issue. This can include a wide range of materials, from official records and government documents to personal letters and diaries. The aim of Documentary Research is to use these documents to gain a deeper understanding of the social and cultural context in which they were produced and to explore the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. 2. Research design Documentary Research is a qualitative research method that involves the collection and analysis of documents. The design of a Documentary Research project will depend on the research aims and the types of documents that are available. It may involve a search for specific documents, or it may involve a more general search for documents that relate to a particular topic. The design should also take into account the need to ensure that the documents are authentic and reliable, and that they are representative of the population of interest. 3. Data collection The data collection process in Documentary Research involves the identification and location of documents that are relevant to the research aims. This can be done through a variety of methods, including searching archives, libraries, and online databases. It may also involve contacting individuals or organizations that are likely to have relevant documents. Once the documents have been located, they should be carefully examined and transcribed or summarized in a way that allows them to be analyzed and interpreted. 4. Data analysis The data analysis process in Documentary Research involves the interpretation of the documents in light of the research aims and the theoretical framework. This can be done through a variety of methods, including content analysis, grounded theory, and narrative analysis. The goal is to identify patterns and themes in the documents and to explore the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. 5. Research findings The research findings in Documentary Research are the results of the data analysis process. They should be presented in a clear and concise way, and they should be supported by evidence from the documents. The findings should also be discussed in the context of the research aims and the theoretical framework, and they should be compared and contrasted with other research in the field.
