

Children's Annotated Bibliography

1. Pinkney, Jerry. (2009). The Lion & the Mouse. New York: Little, Brown and Company. 2X2 Reading List, 2010. For ages 4-8.

Pinkney's The Lion and the Mouse is a wonderful depiction of Aesop's fable. The pictures match the Aesop's fable story. The pictures show the animals in the Serengeti and their actions are well depicted. The owl looks scary as it sweeps down to capture the mouse. Mr. Pinkney does a good job of showing the fear of the mouse and the quick getaway. Children will understand the events of the story even without any words. This book would make a nice accompaniment to reading the traditional Aesop's fable to children. Also, Mr. Pinkney does a great job showing the emotions of the lion, from irritation, to fear, to gratefulness.

The illustrations were created in watercolor and colored pencil. The colors used are shades of yellow, orange, green, blue, and brown. The illustrations tell the story of Aesop's fable. The illustration of the body of the lion takes up two pages showing how large the lion is in comparison to the small mouse. The illustrator further places the animals in proper size perspective when he includes a butterfly and a dragon fly on the same pages as the lion and the mouse. The drawings are compelling, particularly the illustration of the lion roaring when caught in the poacher's net.

2. Juster, Norton and Chris Raschka. (2005). The Hello, Goodbye Window. New York, NY: Hyperion Books for Children. Caldecott Medal, 2006. For ages 4-8.

The illustrator depicts night, on page 11 and 12, in a way in which children will understand the difference in time, through the use of dark blues, greens, and yellow for the stars. The story reminds me of trips to visit my own grandparents and the simple activities we would engage in. Children will relate to the story and how the grandparents entertain the child. I thought the theme of this book, a child spending time with her grandparents, to be sweet, especially how the grandfather makes her his specialty of oatmeal with hidden bananas and raisins and how the little girl knows that "nothing happens" when she takes a nap.

The mixed media drawings look like they could have been drawn by a child. The colors used are bright orange, yellow, red, green, and blue. The characters are believable and consistent with how grandparents may behave and speak with their grandchild. Also the plot is realistic where the grandchild helps her grandmother garden, has to take a nap, and experiences both happy and sad feelings when her parents come to pick her up. The text is happy and seems like a child would actually speak in this manner. The characters depicted are of an interracial background which represents many children who may read this book.
