One's adversary in these sports is not another athlete but the forces of nature particularly gravity. Extreme Sports celebrates the wild world of high adrenaline sports with concise profiles of forty-one sports. The sports range from bungee jumping to whitewater rafting. Each sport is described with lively text and illustrated with dynamic action photography. The sports featured in Extreme Sports are organized alphabetically in three major sections: Nine Air Sports (BASE jumping, ballooning, hang gliding, sky diving, sky surfing, etc.), Seventeen Land Sports (ice climbing, ice yachting, mountain boarding, skateboarding, street luge, etc.), and Fifteen Water Sports (jetskiing, power boating, snorkeling, wakeboarding, windsurfing, etc.). Extreme Sports also features less known sports such as freediving, a sport that requires participants to swim into the deepest reaches of the ocean carrying only the air they hold in their lungs. Freedivers have pushed the limits of unassisted breathing dives to go below 400 feet. The book includes an extensive list of books, magazines, associations, and clubs that would be of interest to extreme athletes. Contact to obtain more information for each sport. Although participating in extreme sports is clearly not for every sports enthusiast, Extreme Sports is a must-read for anyone interested in the sport.

Capturing Kahanamoku Michael Rossi, 2015. A haunting, quietly devastating excavation of a story we should all know but don't. How a surfing legend became the target of eugenic obsession. Gorgeously written and brilliantly researched, this book is both a warning and a wonder. Laurie Gwen Shapiro, author of The Aviator and The Showman. A strange and captivating account. Rossi excels at exposing the bunk pseudoscience at the heart of eugenicists' mystical fascination with race. Readers will find this a fascinating look at the painful intersection of Hawaiian and sports history with an ignominious branch of science. Publishers Weekly. The fascinating untold story of one scientist's pursuit of a legendary surfer in his quest to define human nature, written with the compelling drama and narrative insight of Why Fish Don't Exist and The Lost City of Z. Deep in the archives of New York's American Museum of Natural History sits a wardrobe filled with fifty plaster casts of human heads, a century old. How they came to be is the story of one of the most consequential and yet least known encounters in the history of science. In 1920, the museum's director, Henry Fairfield Osborn, traveled to Hawaii on an anthropological research trip. While there, he took a surfing lesson with Duke Kahanamoku, the famous surf rider and budding movie star. For Osborn, a fervent eugenicist, the tall, muscular Kahanamoku embodied the pure racial type he was desperate to understand and more significantly, preserve in the human race. Upon his return to New York, Osborn's fixation grew. He dispatched young scientist Louis Sullivan to Honolulu to measure, photograph, and cast in plaster Kahanamoku and other Hawaiian people. The study touched off a series of events that forever changed how we think about race, culture, science, and the essence of humanity. In Capturing Kahanamoku, historian Michael Rossi draws on archival research and firsthand interviews to weave together a truly fascinating cultural history that is an absorbing account of obsession a cautionary tale about the subjectivity of science a warning of the pernicious and lasting impact of eugenics a meditation on humanity and the story of a man whose personhood shunned classification A heady blend of Barbarian Days and The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks Capturing Kahanamoku is a twentieth century saga with ever clearer implications for our times Capturing Kahanamoku includes 16 20 black and white photos throughout
