sufferings and conditions on the seventeenth and eighteenth century galleys and is a unique and unforgettable account

The Huguenot Galley Slaves from the Memoirs of Jean Martielhe The captivating true story of Jean Martielhe who at sixteen was forced to flee home and country in search of religious freedom In the year 1700 a fresh revival of persecution against the Huguenots was storming across southern France under the command of the Duke de la Force King Louis XIV had issued the infamous Revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685 and 15 years later still finding no end to the number of adherents to the Reformed faith unleashed yet another wave of dragoonades in a determined effort to abolish Protestantism and unite France under Pope creed and King Bibles were burned children were taken from their parents conversions were forced by every means and the citizens were subjected to outrages torture and death Such an unbridled fury against the Protestants excited an exodus of France's most productive and pious citizens and no further threat of penalty imprisonment slavery for life torture or execution could stop it Follow our young Christian as he perseveres through imprisonments attempts to bring him to renounce his faith and ultimately his enslavement on the French Royal Galleys Descriptive Catalogue of the Publications of the Presbyterian Board of Publication Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. Board of Publication and Sabbath-School Work, 1888 The Huguenot Galley-slaves Christian Gottlob Barth, Paul T. Jones (Publishing agent), 1844 Affairs of Humanity Catherine Arnold, 2025-12-16

A new look at the origins of humanitarian intervention We are encouraged to empathize with the suffering of distant strangers every day from ads for UNICEF to the outcry over Russia's invasion of Ukraine But where did this type of politics come from Historian and practicing barrister Catherine Arnold locates the religious origins of humanitarian politics in early eighteenth century Britain and Europe In the late seventeenth century British politicians argued for confessional intervention in other words for interventions to protect Britain's fellow Protestants in continental Europe By the 1740s however a cadre of high ranking British officials was advocating instead for a new form of humanitarian intervention using natural law inflected language to justify its claims Between 1690 and 1745 British officials intervened diplomatically to protect not only Protestants in France northwestern Italy and the Holy Roman Empire but also Jewish fugitives from Portugal Catholic dissidents in France and Jewish refugees in Bohemia Arnold shows that this new type of intervention was intended to stop states from torturing imprisoning or expelling their subjects and was justified with humanitarian arguments British officials contended that state persecution that is using state authority to punish a subject only because of her religious beliefs violated natural law They asserted that Britain had a duty to prevent states from violating natural law and an ethical obligation to aid sufferers of all religious faiths out of common humanity
