The Hollywood Feature Film In Postwar Britain:

The Hollywood Feature Film in Postwar Britain Paul Swann, 2016-01-31 When this book was originally published in 1987 the American feature film had been colonising the world's imagination for over 75 years and the book studies that experience in Britain where American films have always dominated cinema screens both commercially and intellectually. The timeframe is the decade after the Second World War this was a time when the British accommodated themselves to a declining role in world affairs and became in many respects a client nation of the United States. Part of this changing status was tied to the manner in which American popular culture was rapidly assimilated into Britain's own indigenous traditional folk and popular cultures. The American feature film arguably the most influential and certainly the most pervasive of these mass forms was part of this process of cultural exchange British Culture of the Post-War Alastair Davies, Alan Sinfield, 2013-04-15 From Angus Wilson to Pat Barker and Salman Rushdie British Culture of the Post War is an ideal starting point for those studying cultural developments in Britain of recent years. Chapters on individual people and art forms give a clear and concise overview of the progression of different genres. They also discuss the wider issues of Britain's relationship with America and Europe and the idea of Britishness. Each section is introduced with a short discussion of the major historical events of the period. Read as a whole British Culture of the Postwar will give students a comprehensive introduction to this turbulent and exciting period and a greater understanding of the cultural production arising from it Not Like Us

Richard Pells, 2008-08-04 Debunking the myth of the Americanization of Europe a noted historian presents an authoritative and engrossing cultural history of how America tried to remake Europe in its own image and how the Europeans successfully retained their identity in the face of American mass culture. Pells provides a new paradigm for understanding the survival of local and national cultures in a global setting British Tv & Film Culture in the 1950s Su Holmes, 2005 This book focuses on the emerging historical relations between British television and film culture in the 1950s. Drawing upon archival research it does this by exploring the development of the early cinema programme on television principally Current Release BBC 1952 3 Picture Parade BBC 1956 and Film Fanfare ABC 1956 7 and argues that it was these texts which played the central role in the developing relations between the media. Particularly when it comes to Britain the early co existence of television and cinema has been seen as hostile and antagonistic but in situating these programmes within the contexts of their institutional production aesthetic construction and reception the book aims to reconstruct television's coverage of the cinema as crucial to the fabric of British film and television culture at the time. It demonstrates how the roles of cinema and television as media industries and cultural forms but crucially as sites of screen entertainment effectively came together at this time in such a way that is unique to this decade British Cinema and the Cold War Tony Shaw, 2001 Shaw analyses key films of the period including High Treason which put a British McCarthyism on celluloid the fascinatingly ambiguous science fiction thriller The Quatermass Experiment the court room drama based on the trial of Hungary's Cardinal Mindszenty The Prisoner the dystopic

The Damned made by one of Hollywood's blacklisted directors Joseph Losey and the CIA funded animated version of George Orwell's classic novel Animal Farm. The result is a deeply probing study of how Cold War issues were refracted through British films compared with their imported American and East European counterparts and how the British public received this war propaganda.
