The Hudson River School American Landscape Artists American Art:

The Hudson River School Bert D. Yaeger, 2018 During a fifty year period an artistic movement developed in America that was based on Romanticism and inspired by the wild areas in the vicinity of New York's Hudson River. The first native American school of landscape painting included artists Thomas Cole, Asher Brown Durand, and Thomas Doughty, as well as Frederic Church, Thomas Moran, and Albert Bierstadt. While most of these artists did not think of themselves as belonging to a movement, they did share a sense of wonder at the grandeur of the New World's remarkable scenic wilderness. In the American Artist series, you'll read about more masters of the art world who not only depicted American life and landscape through beautiful works but also broadened our perspectives by employing the tools of their trade with the highest levels of creativity and insight. Experience firsthand these artists' vision and influence through the seventy or more spectacular full color reproductions of their work. Each title in this series includes color photos throughout and back matter including an index and further reading lists for books and internet resources. Educational Videos are offered in the back through the use of QR codes that when scanned takes the student to an online video showing a video relating to the book topic. This gives the readers additional content to supplement the text.

American Paradise Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York, N.Y.), 1987 Traces the history of the Hudson River School of American painters, shows works by Church, Cole, and Inness, and describes the background of each painting.

All that is Glorious Around Us John Paul Driscoll, 1997 The Hudson River began to figure prominently in the artistic consciousness of the nineteenth century when painter Thomas Cole journeyed up its waters in the summer of 1825. The canvases inspired by that trip made his reputation. He settled at Catskill on the Hudson and became the model for other American landscape painters, thus launching the Hudson River School and its romantic idealized vision of the American landscape. The river elicited some of these painters' greatest works and became an iconic emblem for artists and their public alike. In this volume lavishly illustrated with more than seventy-five color plates, Driscoll surveys the ideas, events, and figures of the Hudson River School movement and explores the diversity of nineteenth-century Romantic American landscape painting. Highlighted in these pages are works by sixty artists, including such well-known figures as Thomas Cole, John F. Kensett, Sanford Gifford, Frederic Church, William Trost Richards, and Worthington Whittredge. The work of many lesser-known artists is also brought to light, including that of women such as Eliza Greatorex, Mrs. A. T. Oakes, and Laura Woodward, forgotten masters John H. Carmiencke and Regis Gignoux, and the most illustrious African American artist associated with the school, Robert Duncanson.

Hudson River School Visions Sanford Robinson Gifford, 2003 Sanford Gifford American 1823-1880 a leading Hudson River School landscape painter and a founder of The Metropolitan Museum of Art was so esteemed by the New York art world that at his untimely death the Museum mounted a show of his work, the first monographic exhibition accorded any artist, and published a Memorial Catalogue that for nearly a century remained the principal source on his oeuvre. Gifford's art, which was inspired by the work of Thomas Cole, the founder of the Hudson River

In this new work color reproductions of more than 115 paintings capture the beauty and illuminate the aesthetic and philosophical principles of the Hudson River School painters. The pieces included in this volume reflect a period 1825-1875 when American landscape painting was most thoroughly explored and formalized with personal artistic, cultural, and national identifications. Judith Hansen O'Toole reveals the subtleties and quiet majesty of the works and discusses their shared iconography, the ways in which artists responded to one another's paintings and how the paintings reflected nineteenth century American cultural, intellectual, and social milieus. Different Views is also the first major study to examine closely the Hudson River School artists' practice of creating thematically related pairs and series of paintings. O'Toole considers painters' use of this method to express different moods and philosophical concepts. By comparing and contrasting Hudson River School paintings, O'Toole reveals differences in meaning, emotion, and cultural connotation. Different Views in Hudson River School Painting contains reproductions of works from a range of prominent and lesser known artists, including Jasper Francis Cropsey, Sanford Robinson Gifford, Asher B. The artists of the School, working from 1825 to 1875, infused the American landscape with the dreams and ambitions of a young nation poised for greatness. Beginning with the works of Thomas Cole, acknowledged founder and key figure in the establishment of the School, landscape art became the prevalent genre of nineteenth century painting. Cole's dramatic and colorful landscapes are among the most impressive of the group; he may be said to have been its leader during its most active years. The work of over 20 artists is included here, with paintings by Henry Inman, Jasper Cropsey, Frederic E. Church, George Inness, Sanford Gifford, Martin Johnson Heade, Albert Bierstadt, William Stanley Haseltine, and Thomas Moran.    Hudson River school Bert D.
