Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30 to 45 years of age, who were randomly selected from a telephone directory. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of activity, while the exercise group was instructed to engage in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were designed to increase the subjects' aerobic capacity and endurance. The HR and EE were measured at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The HR of the exercise group increased from 145 to 155 beats per minute, while the HR of the control group remained at 145 beats per minute. The EE of the exercise group increased from 1,800 to 2,200 kcal per day, while the EE of the control group remained at 1,800 kcal per day. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively increase the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.
