failures Anne Sexton was one of them Raised by callous parents she found herself deeply depressed and overstrained in a household with a husband and two small children What followed were several suicide attempts psychiatric treatment and her so called rebirth at twenty nine when she started writing poetry that was centered on her personal feelings and experiences What was intended to serve as a form of self therapy was soon becoming a poetic confession dealing with topics many women and suicide patients had experienced but had been too afraid to talk about To do something that was valued by others gave Anne Sexton strong self esteem but also created a wide gap between her public representation and her personal state of being Critics were in disagreement whether she was groundbreaking confessional or narcissistic or completely insane Or everything at once Dealing with such a complex personality a variety of questions come to mind To what extent did Anne Sexton s biography influence her writing Did writing poetry help her to overcome times of despair or did it even enhance her mental disorder How is the topic of suicide depicted in her poems Can Anne Sexton be considered as a forerunner for later feminist movements
