The Methodology of Economic Thought :critical Papers from the 'journal of Economic Thought [i.e. Issues]' w. j Samuels (editor.),1980 On Economic Methodology Carl Henning Reschke,2010 In this paper I try to show how an integrated evolutionary and mainstream economics could be developed At this beginning stage I do not give more than tentative hints but these in a hopefully comprehensive way I try to be comprehensive because I think that it is one of foremost shortcomings of economic reasoning to focus on one issue and stop in front of connections to other issues and fields A combination of these two modes is necessary In my view the focus on separate issues without consideration of linked issues is one of the causes for the proliferation of conflicting economic theories In itself these are right or at least justified they are less useful as explanatory frameworks for real life phenomena They capture only a part of reality and this under specific different conditions which are related to the axioms and assumptions used in model building They say more about the authors ability for rigorous reasoning than about their willingness to provide workable solutions for real problems Empirical research in economics is not free from this problem because theory and models serve as value foundations for deciding which questions to ask and which factors to research The results again influence theoretical exercises When certain factors are not judged important enough to be included in research they cannot influence theory It has maybe by now become clear that this essay aims at sketching a framework for research and theory My aim is consequently not so much to answer one specific question but to show how questions can be framed usefully in economics The idea to give a remedy for the seeming separation between economic theory and reality This is a necessity for a coherent scientific enterprise I begin by discussing categorization as a means to cope with information gathered in the scientific process and stress the dangers which are implied by rigid categories Then I shortly deal with some issues in the history of economic thought The first is the debate on economic methodology at the end of the last century between the so called German Historical school and the mainly Anglo Saxon economists favoring a more analytical treatment The second episode is centered around the development of the theory of firm based on Joan Robinson s work The third episode is connected to the emergence of the Chicago School of economics and the marginalist debate The critical discussion of the emergence of present mainstream concepts leads to a discussion of Knight s distinction between risk and uncertainty This distinction is related to the Popperian solution of the problem of induction falsification as the only acceptable criterion of science Friedman s and Popper s views are then evaluated in the context of more recent positions in the philosophy of science based on evolutionary views This sets the stage for a discussion of the evolutionary nature of the scientific process I finish by evaluating tools available to modern economics Research in the History of Economic Thought and Methodology Luca Fiorito, Scott Scheall, Carlos Eduardo Suprinyak, 2020-10-30 Volume 38C features a symposium on the economic thought of Sir James Steuart In addition the volume contains new general research essays on Milton Friedman s 1975 visit to Chile Keynes and Pigou on employment and equilibrium and a brief correspondence between Karl Popper and Leonard Savage The Positive and the Normative in Economic Thought Sina Badiei, Agnès Grivaux, 2022-06-15 The book responds to the need for greater clarity regarding the relationship between descriptive evaluative and prescriptive approaches within positive and normative economics It also analyses the entanglement between evaluative and prescriptive perspectives within several theoretical frameworks in normative economics such as social choice theory the capability approach behavioural welfare economics and various theories of justice It provides a forum for discussion between various schools of economic thought and several theoretical frameworks on the relationship between the study of facts norms and values with particular emphasis on classical political economy the Marxian school of economics the Frankfurt School the Austrian school the Chicago school rational choice theory expected utility theory behavioural economics experimental economics development economics welfare economics public economics constitutional political economy the capability approach and politico economic theories of justice Given the scope of questions treated in this book it will be of interest to economists historians of economic thought political philosophers and philosophers of science especially those interested in the philosophy and epistemology of economics Research in the History of Economic Thought and Methodology Luca Fiorito, Scott Scheall, Carlos Eduardo Suprinyak, Rebeca Gomez Betancourt, 2024-02-09 Research in the History of Economic Thought and Methodology RHETM is a book series dedicated to an interdisciplinary approach to a broad range of topics related to the history and methodology of economics Critical Economic Methodology Lawrence Boland, 2005-08-18 Lawrence Boland takes issue with both economic methodologists and practicing economists He argues that there has been too much methodology for methodology s sake and that mainstream economics might benefit by using methodology to take a critical look at economic theory The Methodology of Economic Model Building (Routledge Revivals) Lawrence A. Boland, 2014-05-01 The major methodological task for modern economists has been to establish the testability of models Too often however methodological assumptions can make a model virtually impossible to test even under ideal conditions yet few theorists have examined the requirements and problems of assuring testability in economics In The Methodology of Economic Model Building first published in 1989 Lawrence Boland presents the results of a research project that spanned more than twenty years He examines how economists have applied the philosophy of Karl Popper relating methodological debates about falsifiability to wider discussions about the truth status of models in natural and social sciences He concludes that model building in economics reflects more the methodological prescriptions of the economist Paul Samuelson than Popper s falsificationism This title will prove invaluable to both students and researchers and represents a substantial contribution to debates about the scientific status of economics Research in the History of Economic Thought and Methodology , 1989
