Talking With Young Children About Adoption:

Talking with Young Children about Adoption Mary Watkins, Susan Fisher, Susan M. Fisher, 1995-02-01 Discusses how young children make sense of the fact that they are adopted with 20 accounts of parents talking to their children about adoption Parents, Children and Adoption Jane Rowe, 1966 Caring for Your Adopted Child Elaine E. Schulte, MD, MPH, FAAP, Robin Michaelson, 2018-09-25 With knowledge and compassion Caring for Your Adopted Child offers the wisdom that adoptive parents need to provide the best possible care for their children Whether a child joins a family through domestic adoption, international adoption or foster care, he or she may have needs that require additional consideration. The coauthors both adoptive parents weave professional and personal experiences with essential information on Partnering with a pediatrician before adoption, Helping a child transition into a family, Understanding health issues and conditions that are more prevalent in children who are adopted, Supporting a child's emotional health and attachment, And promoting positive adoption conversation as a child matures. This comprehensive resource offers trusted parenting advice from a leading adoption medicine expert and the American Academy of Pediatrics focusing on the physical and emotional well-being of adopted children Adoption and the Care of Children Patricia M. Morgan, 1998 Adoption is out of favour. Numbers have fallen dramatically and baby adoptions have become rare events. Recent trends in family law make it increasingly unlikely that children will ever be declared free to be adopted while would-be adopters are discouraged by a series of obstacles and abjections. Consequently, children who are unable to live with their natural parents are likely to spend long periods, possibly their entire childhoods, in care. This can entail years of moving and froming between children's homes, foster parents, and repeated attempts to re-unite them with neglectful and often abusive parents. The results for the children concerned are extremely poor and all the evidence suggests that the state makes a very bad substitute parent. Children who have spent time in care are more prone to psychiatric disorders, they suffer in terms of education and health, and they often graduate from the system to homelessness, unemployment and prison. The results for adopted children, on the other hand, are extremely good. They do well by all measures. When they experience problems, these often relate to their early childhood trauma at the hands of their natural parents or to long periods spent in care prior to adoption. In this book, Patricia Morgan argues that childcare legislation and practice should be re-organised so that adoption becomes the first, not the last, option for children who cannot live with their parents. A child welfare system for the twenty-first century should be built around finding a permanent home for every child Launching a Baby's Adoption Patricia Irwin Johnston, 1997 Getting ready to adopt a baby under a year of age takes physical, emotional, financial and practical preparation just as being pregnant does. This new resource provides practical strategies for making choices about names, child care, breast vs bottle feeding, etc., promoting attachment through the senses, taste, touch, smell, sight, etc., as well as through routine adjustments between parenting partners, dealing with post-arrival blues, bringing family and friends on board, dealing with a birthparent's change of heart, figuring out what's an

Intercountry adoption represents a significant component of international migration in recent years up to 45 000 children have crossed borders annually as part of the intercountry adoption boom Proponents have touted intercountry adoption as a natural intervention for promoting child welfare However in cases of fraud and economic incentives intercountry adoption has been denounced as child trafficking The debate on intercountry adoption has been framed in terms of three perspectives proponents who advocate intercountry adoption abolitionists who argue for its elimination and pragmatists who look for ways to improve both the conditions in sending countries and the procedures for intercountry transfer of children Social workers play critical roles in intercountry adoption they are often involved in family support services or child relinquishment in sending countries and in evaluating potential adoptive homes processing applications and providing support for adoptive families in receiving countries social workers are involved as brokers and policy makers with regard to the processes
