Gott,2006 Contains five case studies from World War II to the present war in Iraq analyzing the utility of tanks and heavy armored forces in urban combat Breaking the Mold provides an up to date analysis of the utility of tanks and heavy armored forces in urban combat The case studies in this monograph are high intensity battles in conflicts ranging from limited interventions to major combat operations As the intensity of the operation decreases the second and third order effects of using tanks in cities can begin to outweigh their utility The damage to infrastructure caused by their sheer weight and size is just one example of what can make tanks unsuitable for every mission Even during peace operations however the ability to employ tanks and other heavy armored vehicles quickly can be crucial These cases demonstrate that tanks must do more than merely arrive on the battlefield to be successful in urban combat From Aachen in 1944 to Fallujah in 2004 the absolute need for specialized training and the use of combined arms at the lowest tactical levels are two of the most salient lessons that emerge from this study When properly employed well trained and well supported units led by tanks are decisive in urban combat The reverse is also true Naval War College Review ,2003 Joernaal Vir Eietydse Geskiedenis ,2003 Memory, Masculinity and National Identity in British Visual Culture, 1914-1930 Gabriel Koureas,2007 Concentrating on gender and cultural memory this study investigates the ways in which masculinities and the web of power relations that they entail worked during the interwar years in order to reconstruct the post First World War British society It focuses especially on notions of national identity class and sexuality and their representations in British visual culture in the aftermath of the Great War
