Target Death:

Pathways for Cytolysis Gillian M. Griffiths, Jürg Tschopp, 2012-12-06 At first glance the destruction of a target cell by a killer cell seems to be a simple endeavor. A closer look however reveals the complex mechanisms underlying this task. Killer cells are able to specifically recognize altered or infected cells. A transient contact with target cells has to be established to allow the delivery of lethal molecules or signals. The killer cell then disengages from the damaged cell and moves away to kill other target cells. After the eradication of the target cells, the number or activity of activated killer cells has to be reduced to avoid nonspecific killing of innocent cells. In 1992, Herman Eisen concluded in his introductory remarks in the most recent volume on lymphocyte cytotoxicity (EISEN 1993) that given the immense amount of effort made in the past decade to understand these lytic mechanisms, it seems surprising that a consensus about the principal mechanisms has not been reached. Since that time, advances made in the field of cell-mediated cytolysis are so significant that our knowledge regarding the lytic mechanisms has been considerably augmented. Much of this is due to studies with transfectants and mutants, either naturally occurring or generated by gene targeting. It is now clear that there are two predominant pathways which act hand in hand and lead to efficient target cell destruction.

Integrated Tracking, Classification, and Sensor Management Mahendra Mallick, Vikram Krishnamurthy, Ba-Ngu Vo, 2012-12-03 A unique guide to the state of the art of tracking, classification, and sensor management. This book addresses the tremendous progress made over the last few decades in algorithm development and mathematical analysis for filtering, multi-target, multi-sensor tracking, sensor management, and control, and target classification. It provides for the first time an integrated treatment of these advanced topics, complete with careful mathematical formulation, clear description of the theory, and real-world applications. Written by experts in the field, Integrated Tracking, Classification, and Sensor Management provides readers with easy access to key Bayesian modeling and filtering methods, multi-target tracking approaches, target classification procedures, and large-scale sensor management problem-solving techniques. Features include: An accessible coverage of random finite set-based multi-target filtering algorithms such as the Probability Hypothesis Density filters and multi-Bernoulli filters with focus on problem-solving. A succinct overview of the track-oriented MHT that comprehensively collates all significant developments in filtering and tracking. A state-of-the-art algorithm for hybrid Bayesian network (BN) inference that is efficient and scalable for complex classification models. New structural results in stochastic sensor scheduling and algorithms for dynamic sensor scheduling and management. Coverage of the posterior Cramér-Rao lower bound (PCRLB) for target tracking and sensor management. Insight into cutting-edge military and civilian applications, including intelligence surveillance and reconnaissance (ISR). With its emphasis on the latest research results, Integrated Tracking, Classification, and Sensor Management is an invaluable guide for researchers and practitioners in statistical signal processing, radar systems, operations research, and control theory.
