Targeting Firearms Violence Through Directed Police Patrol:

Targeting Firearms Violence Through Directed Police Patrol Edmund F. McGarrell, Steven M. Chermak, Alexander Weiss, 1999 This executive briefing presents the results of a study of a directed police patrol initiative that was intended to reduce firearms crime The report is particularly timely because of several public policy controversies that have emerged in the late 1990s The first of these is gun control In the wake of the Columbine High School murders the nation has been engaged in a debate over the contentious issue of laws governing firearms sales and possession Although this is not a study of gun control the findings of the study should be considered in the public policy debate The second controversial issue relates to the role of traffic enforcement in crime control In the wake of high profile cases such as the Louima and Diallo cases in New York City and questions about racial profiling in traffic enforcement the police find themselves under intense scrutiny for alleged targeting and harassment of African American and other minority citizens Again although this research was not intended to focus on the issue of policing and race the very subject of the investigation places the findings in the middle of these issues Additionally this study informs a debate that has emerged given the reduction of crime in the United States during the 1990s Specifically to what extent do the police influence the level of crime Police Administration Gary W. Worrall, 2006 Can business activity in itself be morally good and pleasing to God Sometimes business can seem so shady manipulating the bottom line deceiving the consumer or gaining promotions because of whom you know But Wayne Grudem introduces a novel concept business itself glorifies God when it is conducted in a way that imitates God's character and creation He shows that all aspects of business including ownership profit money competition and borrowing and lending glorify God because they are reflective of God's nature Though Grudem isn't naive about the easy ways these activities can be perverted and used as a means to sin he knows that Christians can be about the business of business This biblically based book is a thoughtful guide to imitating God during interactions with customers coworkers employees and other businesses See how your business and your life in business can be dedicated to God's glory

Sherman, 1980 Articles in this volume discuss efforts by the police to reduce violence in society and the problem of the use of violence by and against the police The introductory article notes that when police attempt to stop violence they must often be violent themselves One paper demonstrates the personal and institutional consequences of the moral dilemmas involved in police work when police use dirty means to achieve good ends they may lose their sense of moral proportion Empirical evidence of violence against police is presented For example the first systematic analysis of the circumstances surrounding police killings is discussed and the myth that many officers are killed in family fights is deflated The practice of arming off duty police officers is criticized by another contributor as harmful to both police officers and citizens Ways in which police behavior might be changed to reduce injuries to citizens are suggested in two papers which show how prior decisions can constrain the options an officer has by the time a confrontation develops Also discussed are police shootings at minorities in Los Angeles Many contributors point to the need for more research especially concerning violence against the police Scarcity of basic data accounts for lack of practical solutions to the problems of violence and police Footnotes case studies and statistical data are included
